"I want my arms around them all."

James V. Zizzi describes it as a return to the nesting instinct. It's only natural to rejoice a bit when the last of the kids moves out. Care to dance? I'll get the champagne. But eventually there are grandkids you want to spoil. Or perhaps a rather large and still growing extended family. Many of the clients of James V. Zizzi express a desire for a place for all to gather to celebrate, to laugh, to remember, and come back to ... for generations.

A place with a huge hearth where old memories can be relived, new ones created. A place where meals can be prepared and secret family recipes shared. A place with expansive windows overlooking the children safe at play.

Some builders see empty nesters as a market opportunity. James V. Zizzi sees them as part of his growing family.

A Best Buy From The Languedoc

Renowned for over 20 years, Burgundy-lovers have long enjoyed Antonin Rodet's wines from their estates in the Cote Chalonnaise, Cote de Beaune and Cote de Nuits. Their exceptional skill in vineyard growing, vinification and aging of Pinot Noir and Chardonnay led them to look for an adventure outside of Burgundy.

After a long and meticulous search they chose the foothills of the Pyrenees mountains in the Languedoc. Here they found all the assets needed to make great wine: rich, sloping land; good quality clay and limestone soil; and ideal climatic conditions due to the high altitude. Their goal is to produce the greatest Pinot Noir and Chardonnay outside of Burgundy.

After sampling the wines below, we're sure you'll agree with their wise choice.

Rodet Sampler $105.00
Twelve Bottles
Consists of four each of the three wines below. Makes an ideal summer gift for your weekend host or hostess. (6684)

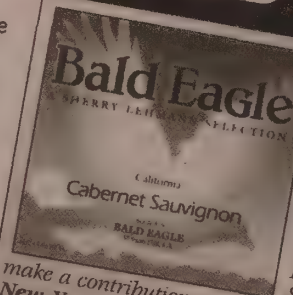

RODET CHARDONNAY 2003 Aged in oak barrels, this well-crafted Chardonnay is sure to be a crowd pleaser. Golden in color, it has delicate aromas of fresh apricot, peach and pineapple fruit. It is soft and lush on the palate with beautifully balanced acidity. (4439)

RODET PINOT NOIR 2004 Ruby red in color with tinges of purple, this ripe and pleasantly fruity wine displays a delicate spicy touch. Look for cherry, strawberry and raspberry fruit that is well-balanced by oak aging. (4441)

RODET SYRAH 2004 A delicate bouquet of black currants, black cherries and spice evolves into violets, irises and peonies. This full-bodied, concentrated and delicious Syrah reveals good structure and length. (4451)

Come Clog Dance for Cancer Care at the Vandersnoot Fundraiser

By Dan Rattiner

One of the very peculiar things about the Hamptons is how everybody dresses up for parties looking like Englishmen and Englishwomen. The women wear floppy white hats and white slacks. The men wear sports shirts with white cashmere sweaters flung over their shoulders. There are other things, to be sure, but they are all variations on a theme. Led by the likes of Ralph Lauren and Calvin Klein, people from all walks of life can dress themselves as if they were one of the original "Hamptonites," that crowd of rich White Anglo Saxon Protestants that were the nineteenth century founding families of the Hamptons, as far as summer people were concerned.

The houses follow suit. For every new house built with white glass sliders leading out to an angular deck, there are ten houses built that are clearly knockoff reproductions from the nineteenth century. They have multiple chimneys, gables, paladian windows, extensions, porches and rooms for the servant class and could just as easily be overlooking the royal hunting grounds as the beach on eastern Long Island. You almost expect to see Julie Andrews slowly descending from the roof of one of these homes under a frilly white umbrella. She's the new nanny here to take care of the kids.

Most of the people who dress up like this today are from minority groups. Ralph Lauren is, of course, Jewish, as is Calvin Klein. The great furrier to the wealthy in the Hamptons, Dennis Basso, is of Italian descent. Forget nose jobs. They are not needed. Where years ago about 99% of the wealthy summer people here were WASP who ran their lives as an exclusive English club into which nobody else was in the twenties and thirties put their houses up for sale with specific written instructions that they were not to be sold to Jews, Blacks, Entertainers or Actors, is long gone, and this current generation of them is embarrassed about it all. That was another time.

Sometimes when I attend these parties, and I see all these people who dress themselves up as if they are members of the exclusive group that at one time excluded their parents and grandparents, I wonder what it would be like out here today if the Dutch had never surrendered New Amsterdam.

You'd go to parties, and there would be clog dancing. The women would wear these cute, white, frilly, Dutch head bonnets. There'd be some wealthy designer (Jewish, Greek or Italian perhaps, but dressed Dutch) who designed this year's version of wooden shoes. People would drink a lot of beer. There would be a lot of accordion music. And the wealthiest of the nouveau riche would have giant Dutch windmills on their front lawns, exact replicas of the originals. (Certainly not like the English windmills that we in fact have today.) The kids would dance around maypoles on the lawn out front. And something perfectly acceptable here would be the red light district allowed, now about the same percentage come from groups that the WASPS so famously and politely excluded.

The WASPS lost, as far as power in the Hamptons goes, only because the population of everybody else rich grew and the population of them apparently didn't. But the WASP community, and it is still here, is very gracious about it all. The descendants of those who back just like they have in Amsterdam. The authorities look the other way.

And maybe the rich would build dykes. (The kind that hold back the sea.) Hmmmm.

The thing about all this is that the rich Dutchmen did indeed behave very badly in their colonies when it came to the natives. But they were always very friendly and magnanimous toward their fellow Europeans. They were a merchant class, these Dutchmen, and they traded with everybody. So they never looked down on everybody else. Indeed, there are those that say the Dutch ran New Amsterdam very close to the way a democracy runs today. They had the vote, they had freedom of religion. They were a particularly peaceful people. If the governor of New Amsterdam was appointed by the Dutch West Indies Company, well, that was the exception to the rule.

If the title of this little story is "I Used to Have an Enemy but Now I am He," a more interesting way to look at all of this would be to consider what we might be emulating if, say, the Japanese had settled here in the 1500s. Japan, in those days, was a peasant class living under brutal dictatorships led by warlords and emperors. So that's what we others would be suppressed by in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. We'd be going to parties today dressed as warlords, we'd be entertained by samurai warriors or 400-pound wrestlers, we'd dress in red and gold robes designed by men and women from, say Korea or Thailand or China, minorities all, or France, England or Holland, despicable foreigners who we used to look down upon and, if necessary, physically turn away.

Yet today, with the minority groups in the ascendance, and now grasping for the gold ring, our homes would have cobbled roofs, little gardens with Japanese waterfalls and goldfish, and a Buddha or two in the rock garden here and there. The best homes would be featured in House and Garden. Owned, perhaps by somebody from Portugal who made billions in the web search business.

Why is it that we take on the trappings of the people with the old money? I really don't know.

One of my favorite stories out of all of this was told to me by the late Robert David Lion Gardiner, whose wealthy family was English all right, but went all the way back to the early settlers. The first Gardiner, Lion Gardiner, was in fact the first white settler in what was to become the State of New York. Those wealthy New Yorkers who settled the Hamptons in the nineteenth century were newcomers as far as he was concerned.

"One day, my chauffeur and I were unloading a big grandfather clock from the trunk of my car," Gardiner told me. "We were parked on Main Street in Southampton right out front of Corwin's Jewelers, and our plan was to carry it in and have it repaired. It had begun running slow.

As we were crossing the sidewalk with it, who should come strolling down the street but Mrs. DuPont. She stopped, adjusted her monocle, and said 'Why, Mr. Gardiner, isn't that an original Dominy Clock?' Dominy was a very famous maker of clocks in the eighteenth century here for three generations. 'Wherever did you get it?' Mrs. DuPont asked. I said 'We didn't GET it. We had it MADE.' And so, leaving her standing there with her mouth open, we carried the clock into Corwin's."

Caldwell and T-Bone

T-Bone Arrested

Longtime Amagansett Resident Fights in Court for His Faithful Dog

By Dan Rattiner

The big trial for longtime resident David Caldwell and his dog T-Bone took place on July 18. Caldwell had prepared a 17-page opening statement and a 19-page closing statement. He had a witness he wanted to call. He would be talking about the definitions of certain words in the town ordinances. He would talk about how they had been administered.

On a certain level, this story is about how the justice system does or does not work in the crowded courtrooms of East Hampton. But on a larger level, it is about the changes that have occurred in this community and how these changes affect the longtime residents who live here.

David Caldwell has a home less than 50 yards from the Atlantic Ocean in Amagansett. He lives in this home with his wife Victoria, his 1-year-old daughter Julia and his big German Shepard, T-Bone. The family is well known. David's parents built the house half a century ago. David has been there for 35 years. And T-Bone, for the last ten years, roams the beach as local dogs have done since time immemorial.

On June 9, a stormy, cold, rainy day, Caldwell walked out of the front door of his house to the shed to get some tools. He was planning on doing work around the house. T-Bone came with him. Caldwell went into the shed and came out. And just like that there was no T-Bone. Caldwell shouted his name, but he didn't come. Where'd he go? He was never farther than the sound of his masters' voice. Well, he couldn't be far. He'd only been in the shed a few minutes.

Caldwell walked around calling for his dog. He went up the street, then down. Just down could that have happened? It had only been a few minutes. And it was raining. There was absolutely nobody there at the beach.

Caldwell walked over to the window of the Snack Shack.

"They put food down," Susan said. "And when he came to get it, they clipped him with a leash. Then they took him away."

"Where was he?"

Caldwell drove to Town Hall and to the Animal Control building, which is in the back. This is a new building, just put up in the last few years. In fact it's a whole new department. Until about ten years ago, dogs and fishermen and sunbathers freely roamed the beaches. And they got along fine.

Caldwell was told his dog was indeed there, locked up. And they had four summonses to be paid. One was for "Dog at Large," another was for "Dog on the Beach," although it wasn't clear if T-Bone had actually been on the beach, "Dog without Proper ID," and finally "expired Dog License." Apparently, the license on his collar was out of date. Total cost, $650.

Now I would like to break in here to this story and ask you if you think this is a proper the street, the road ended at the Snack Shack, which is the little shingled food and beverage building up on the dune.

David walked toward the beach, still calling. And from the window of the Snack Shack, there came back the voice of Susan Seecamp, the manager of the place.

"The dog patrol picked him up," she said.

Caldwell found this hard to believe. How

way to treat a resident of 35 years of this community who is now confronted with new, restrictive leash and beach laws. He knows about them. He doesn't like them. But he tries to abide by them.

Among other things the Town talked about when it seemed they would have to have more ordinances about dogs was tagging dogs with color disks on their collars. Most people know how their dogs are. Most are tail wagers and face lickers. A few are growlers and biters. Given how litigious our society is these days, there is nobody with a dog who wants to fail to warn somebody away from his or her dog if that were necessary. Tag a dog green for okay. Red for stay away. It could be done.

A response to this might be that there are people who just don't like dogs. Well, there are people who don't like a lot of different things. And we have them anyway. We have children with drum sets, people with swimming pools filled with noisy kids, people with cats, people with horses.

It would be a mighty sterile society if we limited what people might have or do based on what other people like or don't like. And so we have laws. Enforce one set for red tag dogs, and a gentler set for green tag dogs. It goes without saying that a misbehaving dog can lose a green tag at the order of an enforcement officer.

And so return to T-Bone and David Caldwell. Caldwell, clearly traumatized after all the years of being allowed to have a dog run around near his home, was staggered by the amount of this fine, and so he demanded a day in court. And he also asked Susan Seecamp if she would be a witness for him, to which she readily agreed.

The trial was held on July 18 at 2 p.m. before Judge Lisa Rana, known to be a fair judge who probably wondered why she had to sit through a trial over what might appear to be such a trivial matter. It was not trivial to David Caldwell. If he were going to lose, he would go down swinging.

His dog, one of the Beachampton neighborhood dogs, was known by all who have homes in that section of Amagansett near where the Caldwells live. T-Bone is a gentle soul, welcome everywhere. And so Caldwell gathered dozens of affidavits from neighbors and friends about how wonderful he was. Judge Rana ruled every one of them inadmissible. T-Bone was a dog.

Caldwell argued that his dog was not "at large." He had looked up the definition of "at large" and it said that the dog didn't need to be on a leash but simply under the control of his owner at all times. T-Bone was always within his master's voice commands, and always responded to them. On the other hand, "At large" might occur, for example, if somebody set out a plate of treats, leashed him and drove away with him. At no time was T-Bone at large, until that happened. Judge Rana nodded.

Caldwell could not argue that the dog did not have an expired license, but he did wonder about the ticket for "dog without proper ID" since T-Bone had a tag which named him, and gave the telephone number and name of the owner. Had that not been enough information?

And finally, he questioned if T-Bone had ever been on the beach. Certainly, he wasn't when he was rounded up.

Then it was time for the witness. The court appearance had a set hour and a date, but there were other matters before the court that ran over. Caldwell stayed in constant touch by cell phone with Susan Seecamp who was at the Snack Shack just a five minute car ride away, and it was a given that Seecamp couldn't be there and wait around, because she had a Snack Shack to run, but there was nothing to

Umpires and Commentators Mix it Up at the Annual Artist-Writers Game

By Dan Rattiner

When the first annual Artists Writers softball game was played in the Hamptons, Harry Truman was the President of the United States, designer Raymond Lowe caused a sensation by building a Studebaker automobile with tailfins, America was still savoring its victory over the Germans and the Japanese, and Europe lay in ruins. The game was played in Springs in July. And in August, Babe Ruth died.

The world was then certainly a very different place than it is today. But in one regard, on a humble sandlot softball diamond in East Hampton, it has changed very little. And so it was that last Saturday afternoon, the 58th annual renewal of this game was contested.

The scene prior to the game resembled that of a country fair. There were balloons, booths selling hot dogs and t-shirts, Snapple fruit drinks and bottles of water, there were banners everywhere, mostly touting some of the sponsors of the event, such as HBO, the NBA, UCC Capital and Forbes. There was even a carpenter's union, up from Washington, to picket and heckle the man who would be the starting pitcher for the writers, Mort Zuckerman, the Publisher and Editor in Chief of the New York Daily News. The Mayor of the Village was there, though it was rumored that people at the gates were not letting him in to officially welcome the crowd until he forked over the $10 admission fee, which he did, and there were crowds of people standing around waiting for game time, and swarming over some of the famous and near famous who were there to play the game. These included actors Alec Baldwin, Mercedes Ruehl, Lori Singer, Christine Ebersol and Roy Scheider, political welcome by the Mayor and the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." Kim Stoltz threw out the first pitch.

It is fair to say that from a sports perspective, the game never rose to the level of high drama that some other games have. Nothing came down the last pitch. There were no three and two counts with the bases loaded situations. The Writers went out in front two to nothing in the top of the second, and though challenged from time to time, never relinquished their lead. They won the game 18 to 9, the highlights of which included big homeruns over the outfield snowfence by artist Ed McCarthy, Discovery Channel Host Richard Weise and Jeff Hilford. On a personal level, I should note that my son David Lion Rattiner came up to bat in the eighth inning for his very first appearance in this game and hit a very high and very long drive to deep center in his only appearance at the plate which was, unfortunately, caught.

On the other hand, there were some very extraordinary things about this game that never, in all of its 58 years, have been seen before.

For example, there was the comedy of Alec candidate Mark Green, who is running for State Attorney General, and former Mayor of New York Rudy Giuliani, who, along with this writer would call balls and strikes. Sports commentator Bert Sugar sat behind the batting cage making announcements and preparing for the play-by-play, and he was assisted by Juliette Papa from 1010 WINS News.

The game began promptly at 3 p.m., with the Baldwin. Baldwin, the actor, has been noted in recent years for his award winning portrayal of bad guys. Or at least greedy guys. You don't think of him as a comic.

And yet, there he was — and he is a powerful hitter — hitting fly balls or line drives, almost always just foul, down the third base line. Bert Sugar, behind the backstop, began to notice it in the third inning. Baldwin had fouled off about six in a row, including one that had hit and deflated a twelve-foot tall inflatable rubber Snapple bottle. "One more and Baldwin will tie the record held by Joe DiMaggio," Sugar said. So Baldwin hit another one.

The comedy came in the seventh inning, when Baldwin noticed that the third baseman for the writers, Brett Shevack, was heavily covered in sand, dirt and sweat, largely from having made diving attempts to catch some of the balls struck in prior attempts by Mr. Baldwin. Shevack looked at Baldwin wearily. Like many of the more enthusiastic players, he would dive into the dirt in any direction if he thought he had a chance to catch something. He looked like if you hit him with a tennis racket, he would disappear in a puff of dirt. So Baldwin blew another line foul ball at him and on cue, Shevack dove and missed. So Baldwin hit another one with the same result.

Behind the backstop, Bert Sugar, whose vision of certain parts of the field was limited by various obstructions so that on occasion he would call a diving catch in left field just another foul ball, followed by — did he catch it? He did? — didn't seem to follow the scenario between Baldwin and Shevack. But others did. And there was a twinkle in Baldwin's eye.

The pitcher for the writers, Benito Vila, a reporter for the Sag Harbor Express, who had taken over for Zuckerman in the fifth, lobbed a pitch inside that struck Baldwin on his left arm. We're talking slow pitch softball here, nothing that could harm anybody, but as Rudy Giuliani told Baldwin to take his base, Baldwin writhed in "pain," then rallied himself to get up enough courage to hobble toward first while holding the terrible injury to his arm. Halfway down he stopped for a split second, grinned and waved to the crowd, and then continued on his painful journey. On first, he actually doubled over for a moment, so great was this assault upon his person, but then he looked up hopefully to see if anyone was coming over to help him, which there wasn't, and then bravely waved away any attempts to come over to help him which might have been in the works which, again, there wasn't. He would deal with this himself, big man that he was. And so he got over it. The crowd loved it.

The thing that had never happened before in this game involved umpiring. Now I know I tend to focus on this because umpiring is what I do at this game, but let me tell you, I have never before seen a game taken away from the umpires, and there is no malice intended by this, by an over-eager game commentator.

For example, Barbara Smith, who owns a famous restaurant chain based in New York

Fighting for Your Life in the Land of the Beach, Sun, Sand and Sea

By Dan Rattiner

"So I had gone in for some tests," Mayor Giuliani told the crowd. "And a few days later the doctor called and he said, well, the tests have come back and the results are positive. And I thought positive? That's good! And I told him that and he said no, bad. With doctors, positive is BAD. Didn't anybody tell you yet?"

And that's how the Mayor learned he had prostate cancer. Mayor Giuliani was telling this story on the patio of the beautiful home of Robert and Soledad Hurst overlooking Sag Pond and, way off in the distance, the Atlantic Ocean where it meets the pond. It was perhaps the most beautiful setting of any party I have attended this summer. And it was about cancer. A fundraiser for Cancer Care in the Hamptons. And the Mayor was giving an award to the honoree of this party, actor Roy Scheider.

Mayor Giuliani's prostate cancer was diagnosed five years ago, and as frightening as it is, or was, I guess five years later he was finding humor in it. It sure lightened up the proceedings.

"It really didn't sink in with the doctor telling me my diagnosis that day," he continued. "And that night I slept really well. I was the sitting Mayor of New York at the time, and the next morning, I began to read the daily papers. And that's how I learned I REALLY had cancer.

"At the time, the first two morning papers I'd read every morning in the breakfast room of Gracie Mansion were the New York Post and the New York Daily News. They didn't often agree with one another, which made them interesting sometimes. But that morning I picked up the Post and there was this big headline that read MAYOR HAS CANCER. And then I picked up the News in the other hand and it read MAYOR HAS CANCER. On this they could agree. And that's when it began to sink in."

EXPORTING THE AMERICAN WAY AROUND THE GLOBE

By Dan Rattiner

A few years ago I lived for several months in a beautiful Indian village in Guatemala. The men worked in the rice paddies and on the farms. The women stayed at home, raising the children in thatch roofed huts. And in their spare time they wove some of the most beautiful and brightly colored clothes imaginable. Each of the hundred or so villages in rural Guatemala has clothing that is of different design and different colors. What is more, the men's and women's clothing in each village are variations on a theme. So wherever somebody is, you can tell from which tribe he or she is. As for the women who did the weaving, they sat for part of the day using backstrap handlooms, and it might take a month or more to complete one garment. This was precious work indeed.

We befriended a number of Americans while we were there. (It was easy to do. The natives spoke neither English nor Spanish. They had their own language.) And one of the Americans, a sort of anti-establishment fellow, once told me the following joke.

"There was a businessman who came here to Solola not long ago. He noticed there were about a dozen women weaving in town, making shawls and pants in this slow, labor-intensive fashion. And he spoke to the Chief of the town, one of the few in the community who understood English.

"These clothes are fabulously beautiful, the businessman said. 'I can bring in manufacturing looms that will allow the women to make them much faster. And we could get employment for this entire town. I think they could turn out a thousand pieces a week working eight-hour days. I could sell them in America. It would work out fabulously.'

"The Chief had the businessman run out of town."

I thought of this joke the other day when I saw the latest issue of Newsweek. On the cover are six Americans smiling out. The headline reads 15 WINNERS WHO USE FAME, FORTUNE, HEART AND SOUL TO HELP OTHERS. Inside there was, one to a page, a countdown toward Number 1. And when I got to Number 1, I thought of this joke and also about how ingrained in the American psyche is the idea that our way of life is the best way — and some would say the only way.

The other 14, of course, were of the usual

The Mayor then went on to describe the horrors he went through in dealing with this dreadful disease. He was in a fight for his life. He felt he could no longer even focus on his job at hand, and with the new election approaching, he announced he would not run. He would have surgery, radiation, medicine and he'd pray. And he'd do whatever it was he had to do.

As I listened to the Mayor speak, I thought of my own bout with cancer. I still think of it once in a while, such as times like this. When I was diagnosed with it — and I had probably the deadliest cancer known — melanoma — I thought about it all the time for years and years. There is really no medicine you can take for melanoma. Not then, and not now. All they have is the surgery to remove it. And then the statistics. Based on its size and how long it took you to get around to having it removed, which they can judge by its level of "granulation" they have how long someone with your numbers is going to live, on average. My numbers were stage 3 and Clark level 3.3. This may mean nothing to you. But my statistics said the average life span for someone with what I had was five and a half years.

That was in 1986. It's been twenty years. Before that, I didn't wear a hat and I didn't have the big scar that is on my back where they removed it. Since 1986, I wear the hat, and I have this scar. And every day before I go out in the sun I lather on Sunblock 35 SPF. I also have lucky charms on a necklace I wear every day. I consider myself a lucky, lucky fellow.

And I am pretty sure I know exactly how, and on exactly what day, I got it. And I was reminded of that too when I listened to Mayor Giuliani, and I was reminded of it yesterday when I read an article in the New York Times about a bill that would put restrictions on the $6 billion tanning industry. They want to require girls and boys under the age of 18 to get their parent's permission to go to a tanning salon. There has been a tremendous rise in the rate of melanoma for girls, almost all white girls, under the age of 18. Girls, not boys under 18, are those who have made a fad out of going to tanning salons.

"In my view, this is a women's issue. It is women who are using these tanning facilities, and they who are at the most risk," said State Representative Carolyn B. Maloney.

"If adults want to make the decision to use tanning beds, fine," said Dr. James Spencer, clinical professor of dermatology at the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine. "But we don't sell cigarettes to minors, and indoor tanning is similar — we know it will cause cancer. Not maybe. Not might. It's going to cause cancer. No one under 18 should be allowed to use those things."

"Melanoma takes years to develop," said John Overstreet, executive director of the U.S. Tanning Association. "So for them to say that we are causing an increase in melanoma among young people — well, it's the opposite of the truth."

So here's what happened to me. My anecdotal evidence.

In June of that year, I was walking around Southampton, a folder under my arm with Dan's Papers in it, selling advertising to the businesses around town. And I went into a tanning studio that had just come into business. The owner was friendly, enthusiastic and yes, he wanted an ad.

"And you should try it yourself," he said, motioning to the tanning bed. "Just rest in there for ten minutes. And then see how handsome you look."

I said tanning was not for me. I was in my forties at the time, and I had noticed when I had passed my fortieth year, that my skin had changed. Before that, I could go out on the beach anytime. But after forty, I noticed that after about twenty minutes, I felt hot and uncomfortable. I have freckled skin. And it seemed to be trying to burn itself. It reminded me of going to camp when I was ten and would get these terrible sunburns. The counselors would slather me with calamine lotion to ease the pain.

"You've GOT to try it," the salon owner said. "Just ten minutes. That's all it takes. What could just one session do? You'll be fine."

So I went against my better judgment and had that one session. And it didn't hurt, but I felt really really freaky about it when I got out.

"See? You're fine! And give it an hour or two and you'll see the tan!"

One week later, a small mole appeared on my

Love Conquers All

They Have an Argument. You Won't Believe What Happened Next

By David Lion Rattiner

This story is true.

It was a cold midnight last February when Frederic Friedman decided that he needed to get up and get himself a fresh glass of milk and an Oreo cookie. Frederic works as a boat builder in Sag Harbor, was tired and was feeling bad about the argument he just had with his girlfriend Patricia Berzon. He couldn't sleep. Perhaps watching some of the Winter Olympics would take his mind off the argument.

"What is her problem? I just want to go to Aspen for vacation!" he said to himself. "Screw it, if she doesn't want to go, that's fine with me. I'll go without her."

He was talking about the argument. Words were exchanged. Not all was well in this boat-builder's house.

And so he dunked his Oreo cookie. It was an emotionally soothing dunk and of course he needed to enjoy every bite of it. Unfortunately for Frederic, he didn't know about the lethal amount of ant poison that Patricia put into the milk before she went to bed.

Frederic lifted the poison soaked Oreo to his lips and took a bite. Immediately the poison went to work and Frederic knew something was very wrong. His mouth burned, his throat burned and so did his inner sinuses. He spit out the cookie in a panic onto the floor and got up from the table and ran, knocking over the glass of ant-poisoned milk onto the floor, for the bathroom. Frederic knew what he had to do and began to make himself throw up to get the poison out of his system. Frantically, he got into the car and drove as fast as he could along Route 27 to Southampton Hospital.

In the hospital, the emergency staff rushed to action, put Frederic on a bed and got information about his symptoms. He said he thought he'd been poisoned. "Did you swallow

TAKE DOWN THOSE PHOTOS OF OUR MEN IN UNIFORM

By T.J. Clemente

An issue that is sure to be played out in the next general election in this country was previewed at a Democratic fundraiser last week. The fundraiser for six Democratic Congressional candidates, was at the Amagansett VFW Hall and was hosted by former NATO Commander retired Army General Wesley Clark. At issue were a group of panels honoring 200 U.S. servicemen killed in Iraq. A New York State Democratic Committee Member, Trudy Mason, played a role in not having the panels up. General Clark expressed no problem with having the panels on display but they were not displayed.

The handling of this war issue by the Democratic Party is a very delicate and potentially explosive issue. There is a core segment that believes the whole policy from the start was a failed plan by failed leadership. Then there are more moderate views of patriotic support for the troops and honor in an exit strategy. Then there are those who support the fight. Who was responsible for not allowing the panels is not the issue, and in fact, the process was full of contradictory statements by those involved. This is a polarizing issue, with anti-war groups willing to abandon candidates who do not share similar view no matter what party. In the end Ms. Mason thought displaying the panels was not a good idea.

What makes this whole story explosive is that it was an anti-war group from Southold that prepared the panels and were most offended by them not being displayed. Charles Hitchcock, chairman of the East Hampton Democratic Committee, along with Joe Giannini of The East End Veterans Against the War were at first in favor of letreview: e. l. doctorow at fridays at five

By Julia Nasser

Last Friday, on a mild afternoon, E.L. Doctorow visited the Hampton Library to read from his latest novel, The March. What surprised me immediately at the event was that this child of the Bronx and longtime Sag Harbor resident, this literary giant and foremost novelist of our nation's history, appeared quite ordinary in person. Dressed in khakis, with humble posture and a kind face, he might have been any Hamptons weekender. Until he spoke, that is.

His voice was soft but deliberate and at times, thunderous in profundity, even when barely audible. And as he read from the first chapter, I, among many others in a gushing crowd of people, found myself leaning towards the podium. The late summer traffic seemed too quiet for him. The birds and babies hushed. Because there is something about Mr. Doctorow's poetic musings, delivered in a torrent of images, which brings history into the immediate and visceral realm of imagination with such force that the Civil War feels as true and close as any of our own.

The March is Doctorow's eleventh novel and the first to venture below the Mason-Dixon line. The plot follows General William Sherman's army as it scorched the Confederacy, tracing Sherman's infamous march — 60,000 soldiers and an uprooting of an entire civilization.

As we heard these private stories of people awaiting the battle, his language reverberated with descriptions of an "army of dogs.....that hag of doom" and finally, "the human reason for the greatest sound on earth."

"The sound of that symphonious clamor," he read. "It was the great procession of the Union Army."

When Doctorow's passage was finished, he looked up — his gentle face, peering over the crowd, a bit stunned at first. "I left out all the sex parts. This is a family gathering, after all."

This dramatic reading was followed by a series of questions, all of which were answered with a level of thoughtfulness that some found inspiring, others found intimidating, I'm sure, yet were delivered with humble apologies and curt one-liners.

"What was your purpose, Mr. Doctorow?" asked a nervous woman.

"To finish," he said with steadfast conviction.

When asked of his inspiration, Mr. Doctorow responded, "Twenty years ago, I read a topical history of Sherman's march and I always knew it would one day serve as an armature for a novel.....I read about these men, their weapons, and how they lived, foraging off the land."

"But I kept it inside for a long time. We always carry ideas in our minds — all writers, that is — and most should stay there.....Once in a while, they come to the surface."

After this, another member of the audience asked him about his process, something which is nearly impossible to describe, according to our author (one of the most articulate men living today, I might add).

"First of all, you worry. You wait for something to happen. You listen. And then you hear something. Books come out of this — these small personal excitements. You've been moved and you write to find out why."

"Take Billy Bathgate," said the author, his voice now projecting in excitement. "It all started with this image I had in my head. In my head, I saw men in black, standing at a tugboat in the middle of the night and I didn't know what they were doing there."

Then he cracked a wry, rare smile. "I wrote to find out. To find out what they were doing there."

He paused, looked out to the lawn and the crowd of wide-eyed summer people and choked up a bit. "I'm not articulating this well," he said.

"Writing isn't always an intellectual process. It's seeing into the unseen. It's hearing vibration in the air and trying to make connections with them."

Doctorow has been known as a historical novelist but he prefers to fashion himself a national novelist. He uses the haunting memory of the past and the weight of what happened as his muse, but most of the action is born of his imagination. When asked how much research he had done, the deft writer responded, "Just enough. It's very accurate, factual, and every word is true, especially the words I made up. Every serious work exists by selection. A novel is a system of aesthetic judg-

The New Dune Road

Transformation to Family Beach Facilities and Museums Almost Done

By Christian McLean

Since before my time, Dune Road in Hampton Bays has been not only a 12-mile long residential oceanfront stretch but a haven for oversexed, over-served college kids and twentysomethings looking to go out and lose their minds. The half a dozen clubs and bars on Dune Road were the beacon for this rowdy crowd, calling them east from Oakdale to Hoboken, providing the perfect climate for Bud Light paradise and the occasional oceanic fornication. For obvious reasons the homeowners who live in this community haven't been thrilled with this lifestyle (e.g. finding college seniors passed out on the beach in last night's clothing right next to where their children try to build sandcastles). Many of them probably cheered when they heard the Drift Inn burned down a couple years back because their pleas to Southampton Town had done little to curb the hedonistic Hampton. Police would drive down to the barrier road, arrest some kids, tell others to be on their way, but that was usually the extent of it. And that's how it went, with the booze business rocking out all the way through Labor Day.

The Town eventually realized the strip of bars and beaches in that area were going the way of Asbury Park or Atlantic City. The families that once frequented those beaches sought other spots, less raucous ones where they felt a little safer. Since the clubs weren't breaking any laws, the Town couldn't just pull their licenses and therefore needed to create a new plan: buying the buildings outright.

They purchased Summers, a wayward bar which picked up the Neptune crowd as they filed out from the muscle beach atmosphere of testosterone-filled party animals looking to flex their pecs as much as swig Michelob Ultras and vodka sodas (the obvious low carb options). It was a coup for Town and commu-

BRING YOUR KID TO THE KNICKS BASKETBALL CAMP

By Justin DeMarco

Three basketball legends from the New York Knicks will be teaching boys and girls, ages 8-17, the fundamentals to properly play basketball. John Starks, Allan Houston, and Herb Williams will be coaching the young players during a 3-day basketball clinic at the Hayground School. The first-ever Knicks Summer Basketball Clinic will run daily from Monday, August 28th through Wednesday, August 30th, starting at 10 a.m. and finishing by 4 p.m.

Young athletes will take part in skills training, full court games, and basketball contests.

The players signed up for the camp will receive a Knicks clinic uniform and giveaways. There will also be an awards ceremony at the end of the clinic for all campers and parents. The Knicks Groove Truck will be providing music and games each day and will make appearances at Guild Hall's KidFest on August 30th and at the East Hampton Y on August 31st.

Learning from three former NBA players is an excellent opportunity and a dream come true for many children. I remember playing basketball with my friends in my front yard and pretending to be John Starks. I would wear an away blue, replica, John Starks jersey with his number three and launch three pointers at my hoop. Unfortunately, I didn't have the guidance from Starks and missed most of the shots I took.

When I was growing up, John Starks was one of my favorite players, a joy to watch for his three-point prowess. Starks was a major factor in the Knicks success in the 1993-1994 season as the team reached the NBA Finals and lost to the Houston Rockets in the maximum seven games. He was an All-Star at the 1994 NBA All-Star Game and holds the nity. But it was only the initial step.

Now there is more to their plan than just buying the bars and clubs. The Town wants to recreate the original image of Dune Road. It is to be about families again.

Several events have been seized upon by the Town in order to get this massive project underway. There was the purchase of Summers, the donation of the oceanfront Pearlroth house in Westhampton Beach for a museum, talks with the owners of Neptunes about a possible sale of that building, and even the purchase of the property that was once the Drift Inn. And there was more. The Town began to formulate a plan to revitalize Hotdog Beach and Tiana Beach, two public venues that had been left in disrepair for years. In fact, just last week, Councilwoman Linda Kabot described Tiana as resembling a third world country. That doesn't exactly scream, "Bring the kids for a picnic!" But Southampton Town is hoping that it soon will.

And so, the town has now announced a $2 million investment in revitalizing

Tiana Beach, possibly razing the current facility and then converting the Summers property into a new beachfront facility. In all, the investment covers eight acres of renovations and improvements. It entails the replacement of 1500 linear feet of bulkhead which has fallen into disrepair, stabilizing the shoreline and building floating docks on the bayside to provide a safe harbor for recreational boaters and kayakers. The site will become a haven for beachgoers and outdoor enthusiasts.

Then there is the Double Diamond project. For the past year or so, documentary filmmaker Jake Gorst has been working continuously in an effort to preserve the Pearlroth house, a home designed by famed architect Andrew Geller. The children of the original owners of the Pearlroth home wanted to build a larger house on their plot of oceanfront land and the famous double diamond architecture of the current 600 square foot home did not fit their desires. Gorst, Geller's grandson, sought to save the home, and began looking for somewhere to place it. Over the past winter, Southampton Town found a destination, Hotdog Beach, but the move has not occurred and probably won't until the summer traffic has ended.

On other fronts, though there have been no agreements as of yet. But if the purchase of Neptunes and the Drift Inn goes through, an era of binge drinking and partying on Dune Road will come to an end. Gone will be the days of the MTV Beachouse and Jager shots overlooking the ocean. Dune Road will be about community and family again.

If you've already put your deposit down for a sharehouse in Hampton Bays with 25 of your closest friends for next summer, don't fret. You can still party at CPI – wait, that will be high-end condos by then. Well, there's always the Boardy Barn on Sundays before you return to wherever it is you came from.

Celebrating Differences

Youths Hold Multi-Culture Fair and Concert in a Field in Bridgehampton

By Rachel Blatt

There exists in this community an energy so powerful, so fresh, so contagious, open-minded and diverse, that it is impossible to overlook. In light of recent tension among the youth of this community — incidences of cultural discord and misunderstanding that had cast a shadow on the East End's remarkable youth culture — several young people took it upon themselves this summer to begin a healing process. Their organization, YouthSo(u)l, is a group working to unite the youth of the East End through creative expression and understanding. It is unique because it comes straight from the youth themselves. And it is remarkable because it heals purely through celebration.

I was a late joiner of the YouthSo(u)l movement and I attended my first meeting in July as a journalist, not a member. I was prepared to write a short piece about an open mic night for students, something along those lines, until Ted Delano and Chris Messinger, two of the organization's leaders, explained their ambitious vision of an afternoon youth festival unlike anything our towns had seen before.

Of the youth, by the youth, and for the youth, the festival called "Soul" would bring together and provide a venue for the creative expression of youth from Montauk to Bridgehampton to the Shinnecock Nation. I realized then that this was big, that I could not just stand on the sidelines as a reporter, and that I had to become involved in the infectious movement of YouthSo(u)l.

For the next month, the eight of us, Ted, Chris, Ella Engel-Snow, Sam Brzozowski, Sequoyah Hunter-Cuyjet, Layna Ware, Camilo Valencia, and myself, impassioned and excited, worked with local organizations, town officials, supportive friends, businesses and community members, incredible people like Kathy Engel, Mike Clark of Crossroads Music in East Hampton, Sharon Ann Bacon, Isabel Sepulveda

MAKING THE FIX ON COUNTY ROAD 39 PERMANENT

By David Stoll

Dan Rattiner and I both have written about the welcome experience of driving fast during the rush hour "trade parade" along a temporary two-lane version of east-bound County Road 39 (known more familiarly as Route 27) between the end of the Sunrise Highway near the Lobster Inn and the 7-Eleven at North Sea Road. The extra lane has been created through the use of cones, which transform the median left-turn lane into a second eastbound lane. The weekday morning project has been a tremendous success in keeping traffic moving, although at the expense of some local businesses thanks to severe restrictions on left turns. Now, County Executive Steve Levy proposes to completely renovate CR 39 so as to create a permanent second eastbound lane, while keeping the median left-turn lane.

As CR 39 is owned by Suffolk County, rather than the Southampton Township or New York State, any changes to the road must be approved by the County. Thus, it was Mr. Levy who ordered the temporary project involving the cones (something he was able to do administratively), and he was expected to introduce a resolution to allocate $12-13 million for the permanent alterations on Tuesday, August 22

(the day this paper goes to press). The plan would be implemented in two stages, as follows.

The first stage, to be started after this summer season and completed before next year's summer season, would entail the widening of St. Andrew's bridge. While drivers may not focus upon the fact that CR 39 is briefly atop a bridge a bit to the east of the Tuckahoe Road traffic light, it is the case that St. Andrew's Circle runs beneath CR 39 at the point where there is no median left-turn lane at all. (For the temporary cone project, the southern west-of OLA and Voz Latina, Jon Snow, John Turnbull, Audrey Gaines, Leon Parks, Louise and Len Riggio, Juni Wingfield...the list goes on and on. With the help of the community, we were able to secure a location for our event, sound equipment for performers, find materials and art supplies for set up, find generous donations for our raffle, food to feed our tiring bodies, and artistic expression to feed our hungry minds!

Our efforts culminated last week with exactly what Ted and Chris had described to me at the first YouthSo(u)l meeting I attended—And the sun (sol) was shining down on us as we transformed the grassy field on Route 27 into a haven of poetry and jazz, rock & roll and folk, Latin hip hop R&B, dancing, face painting, tie dying, mural painting, jewelry making, spiritual healing, blankets, pillows, and appreciation.

Hundreds of people attended the event, with children as young as three beading necklaces, painting murals, and designing their own tie-dyed t-shirts as other young artists from the area performed on stage (and youngsters who are octogenarians cheering us on). Local bands Clive Staples and Too Busy Being Bored performed along with acoustic performances by Dan Asselin, Dan Bennett, and Ted Delano. The Shepherd brothers, both under 15 and soulful beyond their years performed Jimi Hendrix and Herbie Hancock favorites. Real performed hip hop in Spanish,

Ted Delano and Ella Engel-Snow

Dan Bailey and Lady Sophia offered their beautiful blending of reggae, jazz, and samba, Ed Love sang original R&B compositions. Theo Gray, 11, performed a hip hop dance and readings were performed by Matisse Patterson, Sequoyah Hunter-Cuyjet, as well as Herb Brown, of the Young People's Project in Jackson, Mississippi who had made the 2-day bus trip to Bridgehampton to participate in the festival. On the sides of the stage, paintings by Connie Sepulveda and photographs of post-Katrina New Orleans by Ella Engel-Snow were on display. J-Hea Lee, a spiritual healer in Manhattan and new friend to all the members of YouthSo(u)l, held a table displaying the powers of her healing stones and grounding techniques and Jon Snow, Hayground Camp Director and Artist in Residence, headed a poetry table where passersby could scribble a quick thought or haiku.

Last Saturday, we created exactly what we set out to create, a day for us and by us, uniting us while celebrating our differences. "It was worth the two day trip. It was an example of real diversity, the entire melting pot of America. It is refreshing to see young people putting their efforts towards something productive and positive and progressive for their community," Herb Brown told us, reflecting on the festival.

For more information about YouthSo(u)l and its future projects or to get involved, please email youthsoul06@yahoo.com email or contact me at Rachel.Blatt@brown.edu. The art of young people, our expression through words and movement, lyric and vibration is the lifeblood of this community, the pride of our generation, and the promise for a peaceful future. Join us, we are interested in your ideas.

Sag Harbor Chef Gets Ruthless on FOX Channel's "Hell's Kitchen"

By Mike Vilensky

Keith Greene has never been a man to bow out quietly. Growing up living literally on top of B.K. Southampton Restaurant and Saloon (currently Savannah's) in the 80s, he quickly learned how chaotic — and exciting — the kitchen could be. B.K. had been in his family since 1912; culinary art was in his blood, and he had no interest in leaving the kitchen, ever.

Keith Greene has studied culinary arts throughout the world (although only briefly in a school, at Sullivan County Community College). He has worked at Barrister's in Southampton and been sous chef at both 75 Main in Southampton and JL East in East Hampton, in addition to working as a chef throughout Florida and the Caribbean (an area of much culinary inspiration and influence for him). It was when he was working at JLX Bistro (after being transferred there by Jean Luc who needed help turning his new restaurant, JLX Bistro, into the same hit JL East had become) that he received an e-mail from a friend telling him about the TV show "Hell's Kitchen." With both culinary skill and personality on his side, Greene left Sag Harbor for a casting call in New York. Out of 3,000 candidates, Greene was asked to move onto L.A. where he eventually was picked out of one hundred finalists. The shoots would take place in L.A. He'd be bi-coastal, flying back and forth between his job and the studio.

Dan's Papers readers know from a previously published article how it went for this local chef from that point forward: constantly impressing the ruthless "Hell's Kitchen" host (Chef Ramsay, former soccer player/current world-renowned chef/sadist), receiving accolades while his co-contestants received tirades, infuriating his ex-friend/co-contestant Garrett when he brought like boot camp. I couldn't taste anything," Greene says of the serious sickness that plagued him after he returned home.

They were down to the last three finalists: just K. Grease (Keith Greene's nickname) and the two ladies, Virginia and Heather. As it turned out, Chef Ramsay became harder on Greene. "Ramsay — I thought he had a thing for Virginia," Greene says.

It's this thought that begat the infamous aired quote on "Hell's Kitchen" — "I think you have a hard-on for Virginia," the words K. Grease uttered to Chef Ramsay before being eliminated. This, shocking not only due to its boldness, but also to and the very fact that someone finally talked back to the mercurial tongue of Chef Ramsay rather than remaining subservient, as most of the contestants on Hell's Kitchen did while they were berated. Being so brazen, Greene was, of course, eliminated by a man who took none of the lip that he so generously dished out. Ramsay asked Greene, "why do you have to be so fxxxxg rude to me?" and Greene appropriately responded, "because you're always rude to me." It was this clash of tongues and taste buds that saw Greene's demise, as he quickly fell from Chef's good graces and cracked under the intense

They were down to the last three finalists: just K. Grease and the two ladies. Chef Ramsay became harder on Greene.

Virginia on a trip to Las Vegas (a trip he won by having the best meal in the fifteen minute meal contest), and generally cooking and clawing his way to the top and the top three (alongside Heather and Virginia). But after this latest trip, things took a turn for the worse for Greene. His health began to decline, as did his relationship with Chef Ramsay.

But no hard feelings seem to remain. Of the infamous Chef Ramsay, Greene now says: "he really is how he was on TV..... he's crazy when it comes to food. The show is all about picking on your weak points as a chef — he just pushed my buttons." He added, referring to one of the final challenges, "I thought I had good enough risotto!" Ramsay, however, did not.

It was Heather, a 25-year-old chef from Port Jefferson, NY who ultimately took the cake in Hell's Kitchen. Like Greene, Heather also gained experience in the Hamptons — she briefly worked as a chef in Almondito in East Hampton. Greene says, "Heather definitely deserved to win over Virginia." Heather did not have the quick-talking tongue or wit of Greene, but her Almondito experience and culinary talent won her the top honors from Chef Ramsay.

While it was Heather who ultimately won the grand prize — her own restaurant at Red Rock Casino Resort and Spa in Las Vegas — Greene is remaining in the forefront of the culinary scene. He says, "I'm supposed to launch a new restaurant downtown in New York with Jean Luc — sushi and steak. And I'm working on getting my own TV show." Greene, whose favorite restaurant has always been La Parmigiana in Southampton, continues to use his highly honed culinary skills and upbeat personality to his benefit in the kitchen. Although feeling unwell and an inability to put up with Chef Ramsay's harsh, explicit critiques and possible favoritism cost Greene victory on "Hell's Kitchen," he has now reverted back to the calm and ambitious ways of his pre- "Hell's Kitchen" heyday. It seems certain that, while he may have been thrown out of "Hell's Kitchen," it is truly the kitchen that is home for Greene and he isn't leaving anytime soon.

Keith Greene currently works at J LX Bistro in Sag Harbor. He is creating a line of sauces that will be available at local markets and online. His website is www.kgrease.com.

There are few musical artists who can boast such long-lived careers as Patti LaBelle. And Ms. LaBelle's career has not simply survived, it has thrived and evolved. Patti LaBelle is still very much in touch with current music and musicians, ensuring that she will continue to add accolades and awards to her already long list of achievements. Over the span of her 45-year career, LaBelle has accumulated a number of trophies honoring her career, including two American Music Awards, a Cable Ace Award, eight NAACP Image Awards and a Grammy. Patti also serves on the Boards of the National Alzheimer Association and the National Cancer Institute. She also has three Honorary Doctorate Degrees from Cambridge University, Drexel University and the Berklee School of Music. LaBelle has developed and marketed clothing, jewelry, perfume, and makeup lines. She has authored four books, and has been very public about her struggle with diabetes. A frequent visitor to the East End, LaBelle is a major performer and contributor to many local summertime charities and benefits. In 2001 she performed at the famous Super Saturday to benefit ovarian cancer. And this August 26th, she will entertain guests at the Quogue home of Jill and Cliff Viner to benefit the Diabetes Research Institute. Called "An Evening Under the Stars with Patti LaBelle," the event will serve up plenty of delicious sugar-free desserts and raise both awareness and funds for diabetes research.

Patti LaBelle is an entrepreneur, philanthropist, and an undeniable musical force on the charts, but will be surpassed by no other artist in her live performances. Her soulful vocal delivery, outrageous hairstyles, glamorous dresses, and gratitude towards her fans make her one of the most popular live shows of all time. LaBelle's fans are devoted, and she never takes them for granted. She makes time for them and considers herself lucky to be able to connect with so many different people. LaBelle is so devoted that after sustaining crippling, painful injuries from a car accident in Los Angeles in 2003, she took the stage that night and the next, and didn't disappoint her fans. She told reporters at the time, "If I can just get on that stage and sing that's all I wanna do..... I did my show, honey. But afterwards I was crawling. I couldn't walk." Patti LaBelle has such a large following that her fan club is not even accepting new members at this time.

LaBelle is an entrepreneur, philanthropist, and an undeniable musical force on the charts, but will be surpassed by no other artist in her live performances.

The Philadelphia native has a prolific career that spanning her 60s girl-group to new funk music to emotional ballads. These days she connects with some of the youngest and hippest acts in the music business. She has stated that she loves when her songs are covered by younger stars, saying that it keeps the memory of her music alive. And young musicians do draw on Ms. LaBelle quite frequently. Nelly and Destiny's Child have both been inspired by her music, and LaBelle recently recorded a song with rough-edged rapper DMX. LaBelle enjoys this part of her career and stays in touch with the ever-changing face of music.

Patti LaBelle has been called a diva, and maybe she is one. But the soul singer is a very real, down-to-earth person, who has been known to bring her pots and pans on tour so she can whip up some dinner for herself and her crew. She has laughed her way through menopause in the public eye, calling her hot flashes "private summers." She still remembers the days when she was making $9 a week and heating up hotdogs over a light bulb to eat for dinner. Although her $9 salary days are well behind her, LaBelle still keeps that sensibility. She has been professionally successful, all the while enduring much personal strife.

Within a 10-year period, Patti LaBelle lost her mother, three sisters and best friend to diabetes and cancer. She did not let her grief consume her; instead, it fueled her drive to support research and publicize the diseases that claimed her loved ones. A diabetes sufferer herself, Patti has been one of the most public faces of the disease. She adopted the four children of her late sisters and raised them alongside her own son. The generous and nurturing LaBelle even opened up her own home to a backup singer of hers who lost her New Orleans home to hurricane Katrina. The star even survived a very public divorce from her husband/former manager, Armstead Edwards, with dignity and grace. She said of the separation, "It wasn't a negative split...it's sad but true, but sometimes in life things happen, and maybe it's so that you can become better friends for each other."

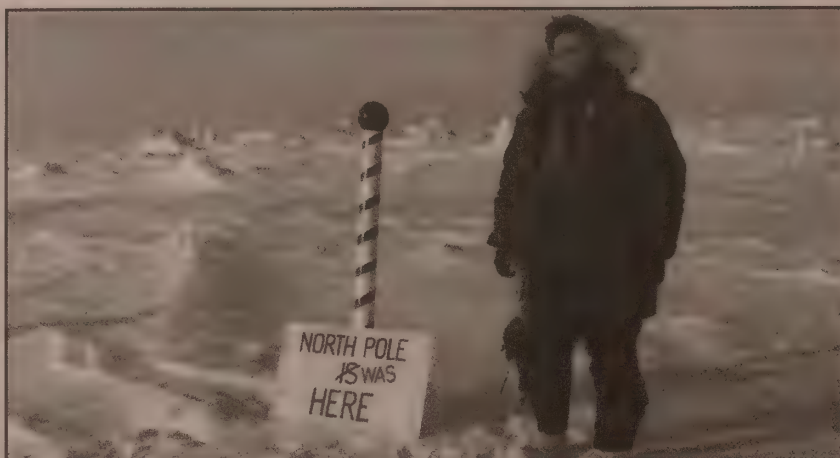

In 2001, Patti LaBelle compiled bits of wit and wisdom from her many experiences into a book called Patti's Pearls. She filled the pages with words of advice from the most important people in her life. Her mother once told her, "Patti, don't be a dishrag, be a tablecloth." LaBelle says that this stayed with her, and since that moment she has never let anyone treat her like a second-class citizen. This

ENVIRONMENTAL JOURNALIST TO SPEAK HERE

By Christian McLean

After spending all day in the sun with a potential UV index of 6, late August seems like the perfect time to come together for an informal chat about the impacts of global warming. And New York Times environmental journalist Andrew Revkin is probably a good person with whom to chat. That's exactly what you're in for if you head to the "Dispatches from the Climate Wars" event at the home of Ted Kheel (10 Drew Lane, East Hampton) on Saturday, August 26th.

Revkin's first book, The Burning Season: The Murder of Chico Mendes and the Fight for the Amazon Rain Forest, brought international attention to the gunning down of environmental activist Chico Mendes in 1988 for his organization of a resistance to the burning of the Brazilian rainforest. The book won both the Sidney Hillman Foundation Book Prize and the Robert F. Kennedy Book Award. This was followed by his highly touted second book, Global Warming: Understanding the Forecast, which was used as a guide book for the American Museum of Natural History's exhibit on global warming. It is written in an accessible form, focusing on the effects of greenhouse gasses, global climate, as well as political and economic issues dealing with this subject. This year's release, The North Pole Was Here, is his third book. In this text Revkin explores the North Pole, bringing readers through the history of this uninhabited and mysterious land into the present, where he documents oceanographic studies through 9-foot sheets of ice. Coupled with astounding photographs, it paints the picture that the earth, not just our town or our country, is what we make of it, "We are no longer acting locally, we have gone global," he says.

When not writing books or for the New York Times, Revkin teaches journalism at Columbia University. Apart from that, he is also an accomplished musician and songwriter who has played with the likes of folk singer Pete Seeger.

Though you probably won't hear him belting out in song, guests will receive The North Pole Was Here as a gift for attending. Also, there will be a door prize: a signed print by Robert Rauschenberg. The event is free and any donations go to Nurture New York's Nature (www.NNYN.org). "Nurture New York's Nature is a not-for-profit foundation dedicated to creating public awareness of the importance of developing and promoting environmental solutions in New York City."

If you ask me, it appears the evening will be a delightful and thought-provoking event. So clear your schedule from 5 to 7 p.m. and get to East Hampton this Saturday. Reservations are required as seating is limited. Please contact Joan Grey of Dan's Papers at Joan@danspapers.com or via telephone (631) 537-0500.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

The Pimp Factor

I have this theory that a lot of the reason a man does anything is to get girls. Doctors don't become doctors because they like to be around sick people — it's because they become Gods in the eyes of women. There is a pimp-ness involved, if you will, around the career path you choose. If we didn't want women, we'd all just sit around and play X-Box all day.

On many occasions this summer, I have run into old high school buddies that give me an update on what it is they are doing. Some are managing restaurants here on the East End. Some are still in school, getting their masters or PhDs or whatever. Some are saying they are going to go to law school but haven't yet. Some are just getting ready to graduate law school. Some say they work in "public relations" others say they work in "marketing" or "finance" in New York City. I have a friend that works at Jerry Seinfeld's estate. In my opinion, this is super pimp.

I have one friend that is going to be an architect (very pimp), another that is working as a bartender in Montauk. I have a friend that works as a fisherman and another who owns his own little pool cleaning business. Almost all the new police officers that are on the force in East Hampton were friendly towards me in high school and the same can be said for the new teachers (pimp in an old fashioned sort of way). Two friends work for their dads as plumbers (not so pimp, but make great money, so who cares?). I even have a friend that owns his own storefront audio and video business in Southampton (makes you jealous pimp). I also have a friend in Iraq this very moment (noble pimp). I have a friend who's a chef, another who is a waiter (but really wants to be a photographer) and, of course, I have fellow writer friends here at Dan's Papers (artistically pimp).

All of the old high school friends that live in the Hamptons tell me how they want to move into the city. All of my city friends tell me they want to move back to the Hamptons and/or if they do not say that, they spend every weekend that they can back here, not counting the winter months, when even I say to people, "I'm thinking about moving into the city."

I have just one friend from high school, just one, that has actually settled outside of the state of New York. That friend is my very good friend John Schirrippa, who works full time for the Pentagon in Washington D.C. and lives about forty-five minutes outside of the capital. He blew me away the other day, showing me his Virginia driver's license. I felt betrayed.

John just got a promotion, got his top secret security clearance and now has a big sign on the door to his office that says, "John Schirrippa: Supervisor." He screamed the news into my ear when he got the promotion and e-mailed me the photo of his sign.

This is what I like to call "southern pimp."

So the question is, which friends are getting the most girls? In other words, what job makes you the sexiest in the eyes of women?

One of the reasons that I write this column, among others, is so that I can say, "I write a column in Dan's Papers." The main reason I went crazy starting www.datehampton.com was to say, "I own www.datehampton.com."

That's right. You're impressed.....aren't you?

Well, I have been writing this column for six years and I can tell you that the fact that I write this column has not contributed in any way shape or form to how girls look at me, which is depressing, because I like writing this column. I thought I had a found a pimp loophole where you could be a Greek God but also enjoy the work involved.

John has been working for the Pentagon for two years strong and his line, "I work at the Pentagon," also doesn't seem to work. In fact, I've been getting some feedback from all of my friends and the ones that seem to get the most attention from girls are the ones who still have six pack abs. In other words, the surfer dudes get most of the attention.....or in other words, the popular dudes in high school. So little has changed.

I have hope that one day, when I am a world famous writer and John is making phone calls that sound like, "Mr. President, my advice to you is to....." then the girls will start flocking in. Of course, by then we'll be married, at least, I would think we'll be married. I mean, that's what I'm supposed to do, right?

Well, to be honest, when I was in high school, I was certain that I would be married by now and be a millionaire by making it big as an actor. That was, like, totally the real deal plan back then. So I guess we'll just wait and see.

As for the pimpest job? There is no such thing. Everyone I know complains about the dating game. I can tell you this, however; women go bananas over firemen.

prevent her from just driving off when the time came on a few minutes notice.

And so, after half a dozen phone calls of reassurance, the time came. And this time for the first time, she didn't answer. He got her voice mail. He tried again. Same thing. Something had gone wrong.

"I will give you two more minutes to produce your witness," the judge said, looking at her watch.

The time passed. And Judge Rana made a ruling. She reduced the fine to $150, and Caldwell, exhausted, paid it. End of story.

Ten minutes later, Caldwell got hold of Seecamp on the cell phone who said she was so sorry but the deliveryman had just then arrived and he couldn't wait and so they had to unload and check in the order. She still would have come. But where he had parked blocked her car.

I might note that I wrote this article sitting in my car at the wooden barrier facing Main Beach in East Hampton. Off in the distance, the surf boomed. Some yachts pattered by. People were playing volleyball or sitting around on blankets. But here, at this barrier, for a long time, there was a sign saying you could park there for an hour. People go down to look at the ocean and read the newspaper and have a coffee. It's a time-honored tradition here. In more recent times, the time allowed is 15 minutes. But nobody has ever ticketed anybody as far as I know.

Halfway through writing this story, which was at about the 30-minute mark, I noticed a policeman in a police car in the 15-minute slot next to me writing up a ticket for illegal parking. Alarmed, I got out of my car and walked over to him, and leaned in his window.

"Parking tickets?"

"Yup," he said, "I was here twenty minutes ago. There are some people here who were here then." He nodded to some of the other cars parked there.

I didn't want to ask the obvious question. But I did anyway.

"Is one for me?" I asked.

"Just wait in your car," he said. This was not a direct answer.

"I do have to leave now," I said, which was, under the circumstances, certainly absolutely true.

He nodded. "Well then, go ahead."

I left. And I finished writing this story sitting in my car now parked by the side of the road facing the swans in town pond.

Perhaps I shall get a ticket in the mail?

Perhaps. Perhaps not.

So much for another tradition that goes back hundreds of year. I'll modify my behavior and I suppose Caldwell will too. But there is a way to do this gently, and with a light touch. This stuff doesn't have to happen like this. It's a bitter pill for people who remember a more peaceful time. A warning would have sufficed.

ting the panels be displayed. But in the end they were not. Ms Mason's influence prevailed and the event was not dominated by the anti-war element of the local Democratic Party.

Thus the problem going forward is to craft a tent big enough to include enough Democratic opinions to win elections. There are pro veterans against the war and pro war veterans. The $50,000 raised at the event will be used to fight the Republicans to win congressional seats. At the Amagansett fundraiser cooler heads prevailed but come the election season this issue will be front and center and not hidden like the panels of the 200 dead Americans. Ms. Mason reportedly expressed a need not to create "ammunition for the bad guys." Are the bad guys the Republicans or the Iraqi insurgents? This will be the question debated over and over again as it was here on the East End of Long Island.

back just below my left shoulder blade. I didn't think anything of it. I pointed it out to my wife. She didn't think anything of it either. What did either of us know? A month later, it was still there, but larger, now about the size of a quarter. And it was dark and angry looking. My wife said I ought to go see a skin doctor.

It takes years and years to get Melanoma? I don't think so. Maybe a month. My belief is that we are born with rich, dark skin full of melanin, or we are born with freckled light skin with only sprinklings of melanin to protect us from the sun. It works fine in such places as Ireland where the jet stream brings damp, cool, cloudy summertimes with little ultraviolet light. But it doesn't work in New York or places further south, where the sun is stronger. Where melanoma strikes bears this out.

There has been a direct correlation made between those who get melanoma and those who suffer severe sunburns in their youth. My belief is those sunburns change the chemistry in freckled skin, and make that person more susceptible to melanoma when they get older and the skin ages and begins to break down.

So much for the idea that melanoma takes years to develop. For those with the wrong skin type and with the damage happening when young, it can take just weeks. You'll suddenly have it appear after a severe, unprotected exposure to the sun. Or about the same time after unprotected exposure to the ultra violet rays of a tanning bed.

I write this on the twentieth anniversary of my having beaten cancer. In my case, it got removed. It was gone. And it never came back. And that's the only treatment there is. For other cancers, there are treatments and medicines that can arrest and cure this dreaded disease. And there is Cancer Care to counsel those who get it and the family members of those who get it.

Mayor Giuliani, at five years out, is a survivor. And he can joke about it as a way to allay his fears and release his nervous energy. It can work. And so can hats and lucky charms. Sometimes. As for tanning studios, how stupid can we be? At the very least, those whose skin is at risk — a simple doctor's examination or just common sense can tell you who you are — need to be regulated away from tanning studios. As for the rest, if they want to kill themselves for a tan, as Dr. Spencer said, go right ahead.

That was once said about cigarettes and lung cancer.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages. Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find.

The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

Simply call 1-877-794-5363

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #413

Mosquito Ace

Is it my imagination, or are there more mosquitoes now than last summer? Despite all my best efforts, I seem to have six bites going at any given time.

Don't you hate it when you're in bed, all comfy in that drowsy, just about to fall asleep mode, when all of a sudden you hear the unmistakable high pitched buzz of a mosquito zooming by your ear?

I don't care how drowsy, comfy, or sanguine you are, nothing will break your reverie faster than knowing that a mosquito is just waiting for you to fall asleep so they can have dinner – and you are the menu. They might start with your arm for an appetizer, moving to your legs for the main course, and top off their repast with your face. I can't speak for others, but when I hear that zizzy sound, I fling the covers off, flip on the light and the battle is ON!

Mosquitoes have been around far longer than people. If there's any credence to Carl Jung's race memory theory, then mosquitoes have millions of years of predatory race memory built into their tiny brains. Whereas we have only a few hundred thousand years of practice outwitting them, so the advantage is theirs.

Sitting in bed, I wait for one to fly by. They have a slow screwball pattern and yet, when I clap my hands through the air, I miss them. It always surprises me. They aren't flying that fast. I should be able to catch them in flight, but I never do. And for reasons unknown, a fly swatter, which works great on flies who certainly fly faster than mosquitoes, can't seem to get them either.

I figured out that their millions of years of experience has given them a sixth sense about things coming at them at a rapid rate of speed. Of course a mosquito being hit by a human hand must equate to us being hit by a building and there's a good chance we'd see a building coming at us. We have to assume that their visual acuity is at least as great as our own. If I can see a building coming, they can see a hand and that's why they can get out of the way so fast.

So, since they know what a human hand looks like, I'd have to come up with a new strategy. I had a small white rectangular scarf box about 10 inches long on my bed one night leaning against the white wall. I'd heard the zizzy sound and was up and on patrol. As I glanced over at the wall, I saw her land up high up in the corner. I knew from experience that she'd fly a little closer and a little closer as she snuck up on me (I am so onto their game).

As she got to the point where she was just past arm's length and hence still in her safety zone, she landed. Landed because she thought she was safe. Landed so she could stand there on the wall and laugh at me. She was waiting. Waiting and choosing which part of me looked most succulent tonight. Slowly, I wrapped my hand around the box, all the while watching the TV and tracking her in my peripheral vision. The white box was camouflaged against the white wall. A box looks nothing like a hand or a fly swatter. This was an object not familiar to her. People never grab boxes to swat mosquitoes, she wouldn't know that I could reach into her safety zone with this box, the advantage was mine.....

She lifted up and landed about an inch closer. The tension was incredible...predator versus prey....I saw her rub her front legs together, the way they do when they've made their decision and visualized a little landing zone on an exposed piece of your flesh, and BAM! She was all over the wall! Just a red smear with broken black fibers! AHHHH VICTORY IS MINE!

That box stays on my bed now. I've killed seventeen mosquitoes on my bedroom wall so far. I know because I've left all the smears there. Just like a pilot marking off kills on the side of his plane, I leave the smears and smudges there, in testament to my skill and determination. The smears could serve as a warning, if the newcomers cared to pay attention.

But that's the problem being a Mosquito Ace, there's always another mosquito coming along. One who thinks she is faster than me. Another one who just has to try, another one who just has to die....

the Oreos? Did you swallow it?!" A nurse asked Frederic with urgency. She needed to know how severe of a dose Frederic had consumed.

"I didn't swallow it," Frederic whispered.

The situation was not as dire as the hospital immediately thought. Frederic was going to survive and the Southampton Hospital wanted to know the story behind all of the ant poison that seemed to be coursing through Frederic's sinuses and mouth.

The Southampton police were called when Frederic told the hospital staff what he thought had just happened to him and as it turned out, his suspicions of his girlfriend were correct. Frederic's girlfriend of 11 years was arrested and he survived the murder attempt, only to feel inside the love for Patricia remain.

Patricia was soon arraigned and charged with attempted murder, a felony assault conviction that could get her four years of hard time. Her court date was set for August. Although Patricia did not successfully kill Frederic, it appeared that she had in fact, killed the relationship. Or so many of us thought. But Frederic's fiery passion could not be put out with ant poison and milk.

During the six months Patricia was in jail awaiting trial, Frederic missed Patricia. He missed her quirks, he missed her comfort and he missed her love. He didn't really miss her murder attempt on his life, but Frederic could overlook things like that. After all, no relationship is perfect. About four months after the incident, Frederic got back together with Patricia and proclaimed to police and the courts that he doesn't want her to stay in jail. "He stands behind her 100 percent," Edward Burke Jr., Frederic's Sag Harbor lawyer, reportedly said.

August came, and the courts came up with a plea agreement. Patricia would not be tried for attempted murder. Instead, she will receive a probationary sentence of five years with alcohol and narcotics conditions as well as a $5,000 fine and psychiatric counseling. Both sides have agreed to the deal and now all Frederic and Patricia have to do is wait.

In the meantime, Frederic will visit Patricia in jail from time to time to help preserve the relationship. Once she gets out, they will move back in together and go back to every day life. As far as the trip to Aspen is concerned, Frederic might want to take the remaining jail time that Patricia has as an opportunity to take the trip. When he gets back, Patricia will be waiting for him. It's our advice here, however that Frederic switches to soymilk when Patricia moves back in.

Love makes you do strange things.

Whispers

With Gina Glickman

"The Guitar Man"

This past Saturday afternoon, I was prepping to host and interview several talented and distinguished guests for Hamptons.com, Main Street Series which premiered on the Internet this past June. As I was about to interview the talented star of the upcoming Broadway musical, Grey Gardens, Christine Ebersole, Hamptons.com owner Rob Florio casually mentioned, "Hey look! It's Billy Joel!" As I turned around to look out the window, I instantly confirmed it was the beloved musician, casually chatting on the street, literally right out side of the Hamptons.com office on Main Street in Southampton. I cracked the door open and waved to Joel, who smiled and waved back. The famous Rock Star cautiously walked over to the front door. "We don't bite," I said, "Come on in." Joel, still proceeding with caution said, "What is this place?" Billy graciously shook everyone's hand in the room, including PR sophisticates Edward Callaghan and John Wegorzewski, Risa Pulver, Clare Bendall and Ebersole who were all thrilled to meet The Piano Man. Florio gave the musician the lowdown on the entire operation, including the impressive studio, which resembles a mini-"Today Show" set. As Joel became more comfortable, I asked if he would sit down for an impromptu one-on-one interview. The musician responded, "But, I didn't even shave today!" I replied, "You look well groomed to me!" Joel gladly accepted my invitation and generously sat down in the chair not having any idea what I would ask him on camera. The brave soul had only one request, a toothpick. We breezed through the interview, chatting about life on Long Island, his daughter Alexa, his career and his main gig, supporting his talented, gorgeous wife, TV Host Katie Lee Joel. As we wrapped up the interview, I asked Billy, "After all these years, do you mind when fans and the media refer to you as the Piano Man?" Joel laughed, "Well I do play other instruments. I play the guitar, drums, and the harmonica." Now, maybe it's Katie's home cooking, but Joel looked better than ever! Throughout the handful of times that I have had the pleasure of interviewing Billy, he Knicks franchise single-season records, which he set in 1994-1995, for the most-three pointers made, with 217, and attempted, having taken 611 shots. In the 1996-1997 season he won the NBA Sixth Man Award, averaging 13.8 points per game, 2.8 assists per game, and 2.7 rebounds per game. Starks finished his career with the Utah Jazz after the 2001-2002 season, ranking 18th on the all-time list for three-point field goals made.

Todd Rome, Dee Ocleppo, Tommy Hilfiger and Carole Rome

When it comes to three pointers, few are better than Allan Houston. Houston ranks 10th on the NBA's all-time list for career three-point field goals made. In 1996, it was Houston who took the place of John Starks in the starting lineup. However, Starks served as a mentor for Houston coming off the bench. In 1999, Houston hit a last-second shot in game seven of the Eastern Conference Quarterfinals against the Miami Heat and eventually led the Knicks to the NBA finals against the San Antonio Spurs, which the team eventually lost to in five games. Houston was a member of the 2000 and 2001 NBA All-Star games and won a gold medal as part of the U.S. Olympic basketball team at the 2000 Sydney Olympics.

As for coaching, Herb Williams is the current assistant coach of the Knicks and played eighteen seasons in the NBA. Williams was a member of the Knicks when the team made suspects, and in fact my hat is off to them. Pierre Omidyar of Henderson, Nevada has made $10 billion in the software industry and is giving most of it away to the needy. Randy Rusk of Wet Mountain Valley sold the development rights to the Trust for Public Land, a non-profit, for just $2 million when it was worth four, but in exchange he got to feel good about the fact that his land will remain forever wild. Brad Pitt of Los Angeles, California was #4. He and his girlfriend, Angelina Jolie, moved temporarily to Namibia, Africa, and when their daughter was born there, sold the first baby photos to People Magazine for $4 million, then promptly turned around and gave all the money to African charities.

But then there was Number 1. Number 1 were two young college girls, Benita Singh and Ruth DeGolia, who, in the summer of 2003, came down to the native village of San Alfonso, Guatemala, and, noticing how exquisitely beautiful all the woven work was, bought as much of it as they could carry in their suitcases and took it back to Yale where they sold it to their friends at a 300 percent markup.

After that, let's have Newsweek tell it.

"By Christmas, they were back in Guatemala, laying the groundwork for a non-profit they named Mercado (Market) Global.....With a start-up grant from Echoing Green, a "social entrepreneurship" foundation, Singh and DeGolia organized 15 to 18 cooperatives in villages so remote that many inhabitants don't even speak Spanish, let alone English. The members produce textiles on backstrap looms, hand painted ceramics and jewelry for the export market. Last year, they grossed about $75,000 in retail, online and catalog sales; this year, their second, Singh and De Golia project sales of $600,000, and they are in talks with a major chain about carrying their hand-painted mugs."

Okay, so one makes a profit and the other doesn't. But I assure you that with the computers and modern equipment and export-import costs and shipping and so forth, not a whole lot is going to trickle down to what has been changed from a series of peaceful Indian villages into basically westernized working class towns. So this is #1?

Who do we think we are, coming into a village and destroying its way of life to bring in globalization? Do we ask first? Or do we just show up with dazzling trinkets such as iPods and televisions and show them how ingenious and wonderful it all is.

I remember about ten years ago reading a book — I cannot remember its name — about a billionaire who gives $1 million to a wonderful close-knit blue collar family in Connecticut. He also tells this happy family that each of them can get anything that they want, and that, on a one-time basis, he will pay for it. The husband wants to be an accountant and so the billionaire sends him off to the best accounting school in the country, which is at Stanford. The wife wants to design clothes in Paris, so the billionaire sets her up in an atelier there. The son gets to go to this country's best amateur tennis camp, which is in Miami. And the daughter gets to realize her hopes to become an Olympic Skier at a special ski school in Aspen. And so the family is completely destroyed. The book ends with divorce and suicide.

You will note that in the businessman's version of life in Guatemala, the American and the Chief get rich, while in the college girl's version, the Guatemalans benefit. "The money will be used for children whose parents could not afford the $50 or $60 it costs to send a child to elementary school in rural Guatemala."

If they're up there in six figures, maybe the money could be used to send them to private schools in America. Then the kids can be converted forever.

I am not trying to make the case for one culture being better than another culture. Our culture is, in fact, a lot of fun and I am personally enjoying it immensely. But bringing it elsewhere, like it or not?

Eight years ago, some students rioted at a World Trade Conference in Seattle and, at the time, nobody seemed to be able to explain what the hell these rioters wanted. Maybe what they wanted was on behalf of non-western cultures, who just didn't want the fat cats inside the conference telling them what they could do with what they had built for thousands and tens of thousands of years.

It's certainly true that those who want a more simple or different life are out there today, and are now determined to get us out of their business as fast as they can. It's sure something to think about.

GEORGE DOES WHAT?

Rumor has it that I've been doing it all over the east end for years.

Well, it's true and I'm proud of it.

I never kept it a secret.

Kazdin Pools always did much more than just build award winning pools and spas.

I really get upset, when I hear, "George, I knew you built Mrs. So and so's gunite pool. I didn't know you also did vinyl."

We do. We always did.

We build any shape gunite or vinyl pools and any spa you can think of.

We maintain them and when they start to wear, we renovate them.

Customers are always coming to our retail location, chatting, buying chemicals and pool toys. Having their pool water tested free.

I guess some people just won't understand that we can also put the entire package together.

At very competitive prices.

Pools. Spas. Lighting. Patios and Decks. Landscaping. Repairs and Maintenance. We do it all and we're going to keep doing it.

ments and opinions. This is my Sherman. The man as I believed he could have been based on what I read from his memoirs.

"After the war, Sherman went back south to revive so many of the communities he had ravaged. He was a deeply conflicted man. Some believed he suffered from bipolar disorder, which would explain the hysteria, the self-aggrandized periods followed by deep depression. Who knows? But it seemed that for Sherman, for everyone in fact, victory was ambiguous. It was shattering."

During this Q & A session, Doctorow was asked whether his historical novels had contemporary significance.

"All novels that take place in the past are about the present. In time, when it was written falls away. Then there's only the book left."

When asked what the book shared with Gone with the Wind, the stoic author bowed his head for a second, kneaded his temple, then responded, "Someone give that man his money back."

A rumble of chortles sounded across the lawn.

Someone else inquired, "Do you believe another civil war could occur today?"

Sherman's March through Georgia

"Good God, no," said Mr. Doctorow. "But if there is war, Americans will be like a herd of sheep. No one will know what happened to them."

"Ragtime was made into a wonderful movie," chimed in another proud member of the audience. "What was your favorite of your works?"

"Ragtime was made into a lousy film," Mr. Doctorow corrected him. "Film is hieroglyphics. Don't get me started.

Film is the enemy. But what was your question?"

"Oh right, my favorite work.....Well, once a book is done, it's gone. I don't judge these things. And don't believe anything an author says."

The next questioner wondered how the author felt about our president, about today's leadership.

"This man, these men, are all subversives. Just like we used to say in the 50s..... They have contempt for Congress. They're secretive. The very election is dubious. They break the law. They're a danger."

At that moment a siren groaned down the street at an alarming decibel. Following the clamor was a cacophonous jet engine overhead.

"Do you notice our enemies will do anything to shut us up?" he joked. And then, with an alarmingly serious tone, "Now, if no one has any questions of substance or gravity, I will be on my way."

And with a wave, he was gone.

mantra may be what has gotten LaBelle where she is, who said, somewhat controversially, at her 60th birthday celebration, "I've been in this business for 45 years, I've done everything myself. The record labels don't care about you. I'm not here because of them. I don't care who knows it." This moment was what some would call the rant of a diva, but I see a moment of honesty; a rare glimpse at how tough the music industry can be. Those are the words of an incredibly strong woman.

In Patti's Pearls LaBelle speaks of her separation from her early singing group. She was nervous about performing solo, wondering how the audience would react to her now that she was alone. It took her years to realize that "Every exit is an entrance to something else." We are so fortunate that she did take that risk and became the inspiring singer she is.

With such a prolific career behind her, one might think Patti LaBelle is satisfied, but we are sure to see much more from this soul diva. "I wake up in the morning and I feel like I have a lot of blessings and yet I still have a lot more to do. I haven't produced any other artists, I haven't written for anyone else, I haven't been in any major movies, I want to do some other albums—a record of standards, a gospel record...I'm always excited about what there is to do, and feel like I have even more energy than ever."

seemed very relaxed and genuinely happy. Regardless, there is no mistaking; whether Joel is referred to as The Guitar Man or The Piano Man, he is a Living Legend, a cherished local, and a humble man who just loves to make beautiful music.

This past Saturday was full of surprises, Humanitarian Honoree, designer, Tommy Hilfiger put on a real show at the sold out, 2nd Annual Red Cross Ball, at Blue Star Jets owner Todd and Carole Rome's Southampton estate. The honoree hopped on stage for an impromptu performance and starting jamming with his brother, Andy Hilfiger's band, The X - Brothers. The crowd went wild and it seemed like old times for Tommy and Andy, who grew up performing together as kids. Red Cross executives including Diane M. Fix (continued from page 35) bound lane is turned into an eastbound lane at this point.) Any plan to widen CR 39 must include widening the bridge. Mr. Levy proposes to use pre-fabricated arches for this part of the project.

Between the end of the 2007 summer season and the beginning of the 2008 summer season, the second phase would be implemented, namely widening CR39 to add another lane. This would be accomplished by moving utility poles to the edge of the County's right-of-way, and then completely repaving the road. Once completed, each direction would be composed of two lanes, one ten feet wide and the other 12 feet wide. The median left-turn lane would be 11 feet wide. These lanes would be somewhat narrower than the lanes in place today, but no more narrow than the temporary lanes created by the cones.

This plan is similar to, but much less expensive than, a $70 million federally funded renovation of CR 39 project that has long been discussed but never funded or implemented. The massive savings are accomplished in several ways, most significantly by creating lanes narrow enough such that the project can be accomplished within the County's existing right-of-way. The federal plan would have required the purchase of private property. The narrower lanes also require the use of less asphalt, as will a plan to pour the asphalt only 6.5 inches deep rather than 9.5 inches deep. Other savings come from using the prefabricated arches at St. Andrew's Bridge (rather than rebuilding it entirely) and keeping the existing traffic light system in place.

The request for funds would not legislate these details, but merely fund the project. Mr. Levy has indicated that he is flexible as to details, and will work with the Town. It is expected that safety concerns will be raised. As it is today, CR 39 sees far more than its share of traffic accidents, a problem that might be made worse with narrower lanes. It may be that the plan as ultimately implemented will have a barrier dividing the east- and west-bound at some points, with left turns allowed at other points (perhaps using roundabouts), rather than a continuous left-turn median.

Meantime, Town officials hope to implement the cones project again next summer, and they are seeking funding from the State to pay for the police officers. County Legislator Jay Schneiderman (who had lit the fire under Mr. Levy to create the cone project in the first place) would like to see next year's project outsourced, through competitive bidding, to a private firm as a cost-saving measure. He also hopes to create the temporary lane during Friday evenings in the summer, rather than only during the morning rush.

known as B. Smiths, and who has a longtime lifestyle show on television, came up to pinch hit. She was thrown three very, very slow pitches by Vila, and swung and missed all three by a mile, smiling the whole way.

This, Bert Sugar could see. It was right in front of him.

"Oh, too bad, B.," he said, "but you know what folks? Let's give her a fourth try." The crowd and ballplayers, at least on the writer's side, grumbled loudly at this idea. "Oh, come on, folks. We'll call it an honorarium." Giuliani, who was calling balls and strikes behind the mound, looked at me wide-eyed, umping at first, then he looked at Ed Blier umping at third. We all just shrugged.

And so in came the fourth pitch and, you guessed it, she hit it, a slow grounder down toward third, so slow, that she actually beat it out for a single. And so now there she stood on first.

At this particular time, the Artists had pulled up to just one run behind the Writers. This could alter the outcome of the game. And so a big uproar ensued, and, in the end, I was given the sad job of telling her that she had to go back to the dugout.

Sugar, however, pressed his case. He had the microphone. "It's an honorarium!" he said. And he addressed Giuliani. "Surely you know about honorariums, your honor." But he did not prevail.

Sugar was more successful in the ninth inning, when the Artists came up for their last licks. They were determined. Down 18 to 9, these were precious outs for them. But hope was springing eternal. Perhaps they could stage a rally. And, as a matter of fact, they did stage a little one.

I don't recall exactly who it was, but I think it was landscape architect Ed Hollander who hit a blooper over the head of the first baseman that neither he nor the right fielder could get. I watched it carefully because in the sky, it was curving foul, but when it dropped, it was still fair by a foot, and so that's how I called it. Hollander raced around first and headed for second. Meanwhile, Writer Ken Auletta had run and got it, and he fired a strike to Greg Bello at shortstop covering second, which was late and so Hollander was safe with a double. But then forward motion took him past the bag, and as he scrambled to get back, Bello tagged him. OUT, I shouted, as did Giuliani and Blier from third. It was clear as day.

To my surprise, the Artists began swarming on the field.

"Out? You call him out? The ball was DEAD. It had skipped under the rope."

(A rope, three feet off the ground, ran in foul territory from home plate to deep center, defining the place in front of which spectators were not allowed to sit.)

"It's right there in the rule books. This is a ground rule double!"

I'm thinking — what rulebooks? There's no rules about ropes.

The Artists appealed to Giuliani. "I didn't see it go under the rope," he said. I had run over. He turned to me. "Did YOU see it?"

Hell no, I hadn't seen it. So he was out at second. And so it was ruled. The players cleared the field. And the batter trotted off. But then Sugar, with the microphone behind the backstop, weighed in.

"How could they call him out? It was a dead ball. Man on second." And so the Artists came running back.

Now arguments were going every which way, even more loudly than before. It was the top of the ninth, after all. But then the game was almost over. And finally we realized we really had to get on with it. And so we did something completely unique. We compromised.

"So this is based on nothing whatsoever in the rule books," an Artist said.

"I like that. Nothing in the rule books," a Writer said.

We gave the batter first base. Not second. A perfect solution between civilized gentlemen is what it was. It was neither here nor there, and nobody got everything of what they wanted. And everybody went off the field happy.

But a nine run deficit is a nine run deficit. It's so unlikely. And from here, the Artists rally kind of petered out and soon thereafter the game ended. And so that was that.

The fans drifted off. The players, most of them, repaired to Leif Hope's restaurant for some celebratory beer and hors d'oeuvres and to congratulate one another. And there Leif stood up on a chair to announce that the game had raised a record amount of money, $21,000, for East End Hospice, Phoenix House and East Hampton Day Care and everyone cheered.

Finally, the Player of the Game was announced by sportswriter Mike Lupica. He had everyone gather around him while he talked on the cell phone to Roy Scheider, the actor, who, in spite of just recovering from a serious illness, had come to pitch what he hoped would be one inning of the game. He is the longtime pitcher for the Artists. And he had come, and he had, unflinchingly and with no complaints, pitched six.

Lupica had checked with me and he had checked with everybody he could find. "For the first time in the 58-year history of this baseball game," Lupica said over the cell phone, "all the artists and all the writers have unanimously selected you as the player of the game. Congratulations. And we are all here at Leif's to applaud you."

And we all raised our glasses and let out a loud, long cheer for Roy Scheider.

The Souls Of The North Fork

A New Show Will Air On PBS About People That Live On The North Fork

By T.J. Clemente

The North Fork of Long Island has always been a jewel. Its scenery is gorgeous, but it is the interesting people, or the souls if you will, of the North Fork that Brent Sterling Nemetz will highlight on his 10 part PBS series, "The Souls of New York: North Fork."

A filmmaker out of NYU, Mr. Nemetz lives with his lovely wife Kristi in Greenport, in a captain's house circa 1897. He has long admired the very fabric of the individual that lives on the North Fork especially the ones that do the odd and unusual chores or jobs in the area. Mr. Nemetz has picked some of his favorite spots to concentrate the show on, using both his eye and camera to capture the soul of the stories. He said it was not hard to do because he enjoys and feels the soul of the area, it is also one of the main reasons he chooses to live on the North Fork.

After film school, Mr. Nemetz went to California to get film experience, and it was there in Los Angeles that he first came up with the concept of doing films about the "souls" of an area. His show "Souls of Los Angeles" became a successful hit on the PBS station there. And so, being from New York, Brent decided to put his love for New York and his formula for the show behind a project to both entertain and teach New Yorkers about themselves.

A favorite place on the North Fork for Brent Sterling Nemetz is The Old Field Vineyard in Southold. Of the over 40 wineries on the North Fork, The Old Field is Mr. Nemetz favorite because it has a rich history dating back to the 1600s and he believes the owners Chris and Ros Baiz are doing an outstanding job bringing out the essence of the soul of that winery. Brent loves the atmosphere of the old hotel, now turned into home that has chickens and other farm animals scurrying about to create a charm that leads your eyes to a vista that is boarded by the Long Island Sound. I look forward to seeing how he frames this story.

Another feature will be of Jimmy King, known to residents of the North Fork for his many long, hard hours all year round pulling lobsters out of the sound. The hard working realities of a job that is still so much a vocation as it was in the earliest of times on the North Fork as well as perhaps the whole East Coast right up to Maine. Brent will extract the soul of Jimmy King and let his lens-craft tell the story. This is another favorite of Brent's because Jimmy's been at it for over 50 years, up at the crack of dawn, checking his lobster pots. The excitement of the catch as well as the skill acquired after so many years on the job, has created a long love affair with the sound.

Next to be explored and filmed is the Custer Observatory, which is under the supervision of Jeffrey Owen Katz. The wonderment of the stars and astronomy will be presented in Brent's unique style as the world of astronomy is explored. Man has always been fascinated with the stars and the heavens above. The clear nights of the North Fork has always put on quite a stellar show for all those who have the ability to take the time to just pause and look up. How many wishes have you made on a shooting star on a North Fork night?

There is also going to be a story of a lighthouse on the North Fork that you stay at and that has no electricity. A chef shows up and prepares a lobster dinner for you to the sounds of the water crashing into the rocks below and in cadence to the flickering flames of candles.

So I advise all those interested to turn on the television on Wednesday, September 6 to channel 21 and watch the skill of craft within the film making talents of a Mr. Brent Sterling Nemetz. The title of the show is "The Souls of New York: North Fork" and it is something that you might want to check out.

Lobster Information

Many North Forkers Love Lobster, But Few Know Anything About Them

By Nancy Keeshan

The North Fork is a true place for the lobster lover. I've been thinking about doing a piece on lobsters for quite some time. However, it wasn't until the other day that I knew I had my story. When I told a friend of mine that I was looking for information on lobsters, she told a rather amusing lobster tale.

The story involves a few lobstermen out of Maine and some Barbie garments. No there's nothing wrong with your eyesight. You read it right. Lobstermen and Barbie. As the story goes, a female lobster off the coast of Maine has cheated death over 10 times thanks to a couple of local fishermen and their strange sense of humor. One afternoon, after a rather uneventful fishing trip, they decided as a gag, that they would dress up a lobster. Complete with checkered blouse, skirt and high heels, they proceeded to return it back into a trap fully clothed. "Barbie Lobster," as she is now known, has been hauled up numerous times by unsuspecting fishermen and radios come alive with laughter every time she is spotted. True story! The fisherman reported a bit of a challenge putting the high heels on the tiny lobster legs, but their efforts seemed to have worked. The last sighting caught "Barbie" without her dress but with high heels intact. I'm not sure what to make of it all. In any event, I thought it was a perfect opportunity to take a closer look at the lobster, a truly amazing creature, well dressed or not.

A BIT OF HISTORY

Long ago, lobsters were so plentiful that Native Americans used them to fertilize their crops. Until the 1800s, lobstering was done by gathering them along the shoreline by hand. During colonial times, lobsters were considered "poverty food." Prisoners and servants were fed lobsters. There is a report that at one point prisoners in New England led a small uprising against being fed lobster one too many times!

Around the mid 19th century, lobster traps were fashioned in Maine and today it has become the largest lobster producing state in the nation. Lobstermen were originally called "Smackmen". The name came from their boats. "Smacks" were small sailing vessels with tanks inside that had small holes drilled into the sides to allow seawater to circulate. These tanks made it possible to transport live lobsters over long distances. By the 1930s Smackmen were replaced by local, land based lobster dealers. These local dealers serve as a link between the lobstermen and the public.

LOBSTER FACTS

The North American Lobster is one of our favorite kinds of seafood. Sometimes called the American Lobster, it can be found on the east coast of North America, anywhere from Newfoundland to North Carolina. However, approximately 90% of lobsters are caught off of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Maine.

The lobster is part of the Crustacean family. It shares features similar to crabs, shrimp, crayfish, and barnacles. Lobsters prefer to live among rocky areas, hiding in and about seaweed. They will even burrow into the ocean's muddy bottom if they cannot find shelter any place else. A lobster's body is divided into three sections, the head, the thorax and the tail, but the coolest thing about a lobster is its legs. It has so many of them! The first two limbs are powerful claws also called chelipeds. I never noticed but one of them is actually much larger than the other. One is for crushing food, while the other used for gripping and tearing. The other many limbs are used for multiple purposes including moving around, eating, cleaning, and for finding food etc.

WHAT DO LOBSTERS EAT?

Lobsters move around and hunt at night. They eat mainly fresh food, meaning tiny fish, clams, mussels, and even other lobsters. They can be aggressive, territorial and secretive. In fact, they are like an organized lobster "mob". Ones that live together whether in tanks or on the ocean bottom usually fight for territorial rights and to establish who's the boss. The head lobster is usually, (no surprise) the larger more aggressive one.

WHAT IS MOLTING?

Molting is what lobsters do when they are growing. They struggle out of their shells while at the same time absorbing water to grow bigger. After shedding their shells, the new skin will harden and form a new shell. Lobsters will molt over 25 times during the first 5 years of life. No one knows how to tell the exact age of a lobster, mostly a guess is made by his or her body size but these amazing creatures can live a long time! Some can live fifty years or more if they aren't caught. Since they can live so long, they can also tend to grow very large. The biggest lobster ever caught weighed

OVER THE BARREL...

A Taste of the North Fork at Waters Crest Winery

Waters Crest Winery, co-owned by Jim and Linda Waters, offers visitors a true taste of the North Fork. They offer their small production wines for tasting and for purchase of course, but they take their "local" focus even further, selling locally produced jams, mustards, salad dressing and cookies. On occasion, Jim can be seen offering nibbles of cheese purchased at The Village Cheese shop with his wines.

A volunteer fireman and fire commissioner, Waters clearly cares for his community and through his little tasting room — tucked into an industrial park in Cutchogue — he's doing what he can to support local producers.

A former home winemaker turned professional, Waters' production runs are small (he made only 50 cases of his sold-out 2001 Meritage and sells out of his wines rather quickly) but he can honestly say that he has touched every single bottle coming out of his winery. Calling his wines "hand crafted" is more than marketing hyperbole. Waters has some new wines, including a 2005 Reserve Chardonnay and some 2004 reds, coming out in the next month or so. But, earlier this summer he started selling four other wines from the 2005 vintage — all suitable for sipping as summer winds down. Jim's 2005 Waters Crest Winery Rose, made with a combination of red and white grapes, is a pretty copper-pink and very fruity on the nose with bright aromas of strawberry kool-aid, watermelon and lime. While lightly sweet, there is enough acidity present to keep the wine fresh. Strawberry flavors rule the palate with a squirt of lime zest on a tart finish. Waters Crest makes one of Long Islands best Rieslings — always a favorite in fact. The 2005 Riesling, such a pale yellow that it's almost colorless, was a bit austere when tasted not long after bottling, with a tight, lean nose and mellow melon flavors. A few months in bottle will help this open up and become more interesting — just in time for Thanksgiving where Riesling shines. Gewürztraminer isn't for everyone. It can be abrasive and in-your-face, but Waters Crest Winery's 2005 Gewürztraminer avoids that pitfall while still staying true to the exotic variety. Medium-light gold, the nose is classic gewürztraminer — lychee nut, rose petals and gingery-sweet spice. The palate is floral and citrusy with distinct lemon flavors and a lime-inflected nutty finish. Just a bit more acidity would help focus this wine, but it's still a nice everyday-style gewürztraminer. The best of the new releases, Waters Crest Winery's 2005 Chardonnay is an improvement on the 2004 non-reserve chardonnay release. It has some sauvignon blanc-esque character, with fresh, bright grapefruit aromas accented with just a hint of passion fruit. Clean and refreshing, this is the style chardonnay that I prefer — fruit without overbearing oak. Vibrant citrus, melon and mineral flavors cleanse and please the palate. Steel-fermented Long Island chardonnay — it's perfect for summer and seafood. Waters Crest Winery is located at 22355 Route 48, Cutchogue, New York, 631-734-5065.

The house is expensive. Your mortgage shouldn't be.

No one has to tell you about the price of a house today. Just look in the newspapers or the window of your local realtor. While a lot of people negotiate to get a good bargain on their new home, a surprising number still don't receive the best deal on the mortgage needed to buy that home.

more than 45 lbs. and measured three feet long!

SOME INTERESTING STUFF

Besides the brownish green lobsters we see in the tanks in the fish markets, lobsters can come in some unusual colors. Rare lobsters are sometimes blue, yellow, or even white.

Many times I wondered if a lobster suffers when it's placed in that large pot of boiling water and it kind of creeps me out a bit. However, the nervous system of a lobster is very primitive and contains less nerve ending than humans. In fact if necessary a lobster can self-amputate a claw or leg and it will eventually regenerate itself. Remarkable! The fact is that a lobster has no cerebral cortex, the area of the brain that feels pain. So, it's pretty safe to assume they do not suffer. Thank heavens, because I really do enjoy a good lobster dinner. I can now rest assured that the sound I sometimes hear coming from the lobster pot, is not screaming.....it's just part of the cooking. Whew!

They Are Camping Here?

Campers Are Heading For North Fork Campgrounds

By Phyllis Lombardi

On the road again. This time of year that's where they are – North Fork campers are heading to their favorite campsite. Just ask Bill Penney, owner of East End Campers on Youngs Avenue and Route 48 in Southold. He'll tell you the most popular destinations for our camping brethren include upstate New York, New England, and the southeastern states.

Now if what Bill says is accurate (and he's been in the business for 27 years), there's something strange going on down Moore's Lane in Greenport. Turn in at the sign reading McCann Trailer Park and Campground and you'll see dozens of camping trailers and perhaps 20 tenting sites, all in use. If all our campers are out of town, who are these people? Why are they here? Does the village of Greenport know about this?

You bet it does. Matter of fact, the village owns McCann Campground. Way back, the McCann family owned the land and grew potatoes there. In a most generous gesture, the land was willed to the town for recreational use in perpetuity. Today the campground is expertly and lovingly managed by Will and Pauline Winterbottom who live on site during the camping season, May 1 through October 31. Those two, Will and Pauline, should be able to tell us who the UCOs (Unidentified Camper Occupants) are.

The first thing I noticed on turning off Moores Lane into the campground was the five-miles-per-hour sign. That certainly set the pace for careful observation of the place. Hmm. Kinda pretty. Trees. Picnic tables, benches and umbrellas. And over there a stream. All sizes and shapes of flower boxes, most of them filled with wave petunias. Somebody cares, for sure.

That must be Will doing some carpentry work just outside the office. Did he mind a few questions?

Not at all. He provided me with a comfortable canvas chair and lots of stories about the campers. For the most part, they are not North Forkers. They come from California, Texas, Germany, even Australia. The Australian was a guest last season. A 65-year old, he'd flown from Australia to Canada and then rode a motorcycle from Canada to Greenport. Will claimed the Aussie joked about traveling so he could get away from his wife. Just in case there's some truth to this, the camper will remain nameless.

Will suggested I walk around and chat with some campers. They're a friendly bunch, he said, and they like to talk. Good. So do I. Thus it was I vacated the canvas chair and headed out alone among non-North Forkers.

My first stop was the 1975 Airstream belonging to Ron and Eileen Doda of Smithtown. They've camped in Connecticut and Massachusetts but this spot in Greenport is one of their favorites. Ron, a retired New York City police officer, occasionally brings his boat to the campground and then goes fishing in local waters. Both Ron and Eileen enjoy eating in North Fork restaurants and Ron had special praise for the Arcade Variety Store in Greenport. There's always something there, he said, that's just right for his 30-year-old camper. "It was my father's," he said. He need say no more.

Eileen, who teaches in a Hauppauge school, introduced me to Snowy, the couple's yellow Lab. Yes, the campground welcomes pets, leashed, of course. And then, another bit of information. The Doda family belongs to the Wally Byam Caravan Club (a U.S. Airstream Club). These guys get around.

I thanked Ron and Eileen for the drinks we enjoyed while talking (just soda), said goodbye and walked to the wooden footbridge crossing the stream. There I met another group of campers.

Paul Ramdath lives in Astoria but has been camping here in Greenport for several years. Paul and his two boys, Damian and Dylan, were on a tadpole hunt. Damian and Dylan, hardly bigger than tadpoles themselves, were eager to tell me about frogs, too. I might add they then directed my attention to their mother at a distant campsite.

The Ramdath family had some visitors on this Sunday afternoon and Paul spoke of the good eating planned for later in the day. The last I saw of them? Playing softball and working up an appetite.

Oh, campers eat well. I have to tell you that I interrupted the outdoor meal of Port Jefferson Station's Charlie and Diane Gleberman when I wandered over to their campsite and said hello. Their menu? Cornish hen, corn on the cob, pecan pie. Really. Not a hot dog in sight.

Diane's mother, Marjorie Bloom, grew up on Carpenter Avenue in Greenport. And so, for Diane, coming to the Greenport campsite means more than an enjoyable vacation. Diane says she drives or walks past the old home and feels close to her mother. I guess that's a North Fork blessing, Diane.

The Glebermans mentioned, as did other campers, that Greenport's charm is its reality. People live here, work here. Regular people, in regular homes, doing regular things. It's that way all over the North Fork, they said. That's why the campers return, regularly.

And each time they return they see that Will and Pauline are still working hard. Pauline, for example, has designed several small theme gardens. Ceramic cats fill one garden, roosters another, frogs a third. Points of interest on an early morning or sunset walk around the campground.

I Guess I found out who these campers are. They're hikers, bikers, swimmers, readers, ice cream eaters, fireworks watchers, campfire cooks, souvenir searchers. Could it be? They're not from the North Fork. But they're just like us.

Fantastic!

You Will Not Believe The Spa At East Wind In Wading River

By Whitney Gallo

The summer can have a lot of negative effects on your body. The beautiful weather tends to motivate me to wake up early and fill my day with activities. This summer I started taking polo lessons. I love horses and horseback riding so why not use the skills I have perfected to learn a new sport? Well, I have been taking lessons with my coach Ezra every Thursday, however the sport takes a toll on my body.

Friday morning through Sunday evening I can barely walk because my muscles are so sore from my Thursday morning polo lesson. I needed to figure out a way to relax my aching muscles and I found the perfect solution. I spent Saturday morning at The Spa at East Wind. If you have not been to The Inn or The Spa at East Wind. You are missing out on one of the jewels of the North Fork.

Hidden amongst the endless farms on Route 25A, The Inn at East Wind is amazing. The original plans for The Inn came about in 1998 and the grand opening was in September 2002. Situated on 11 acres, The Inn features a pub, lounge, restaurant, wine cellar, spa, gourmet shop, bakery, florist, board rooms, conference rooms, grand ballroom, and luxury accommodations for both business and leisure travelers. Did I mention that the spa has an indoor pool and fitness center that are open to the public with a small membership fee?

When I arrived at East Wind and jumped out of my SUV, my body was aching. I could not wait for the massage therapist to perform her magic. I knew I was getting close to the spa when I smelled a floral aroma lingering in the air. Since this was my first visit to the Spa at East Wind, the receptionist asked me to fill out a brief form about my medical history, allergies, and general information.

Lauren, my massage therapist, greeted me and led me to my treatment room. The treatment room was one of the most elegant treatment rooms I have seen. The Victorian décor was gorgeous and the massage bed was very comfortable.

I told Lauren that my back was in knots and my thighs were very sore from my polo lesson. With this in mind, we chose the Health Maintenance Massage. This massage is great for athletes and people who work out regularly since it combines compression and stretching. The treatment is designed to target specific areas of tension and limited range of motion, reducing muscle pain, promoting flexibility and restoring vigor. After reading the description for this massage, I knew that I was going to walk out of the spa with a more relaxed body, and I was right.

Lauren was a great masseuse. After graduating from massage therapy school in Ithaca in 2003, she returned to her hometown on the North Fork to work. She has been working at the Spa at East Wind since it opened.

Interested in learning about what she was doing, I asked her about the different techniques she uses in this particular treatment. She combines stretching with a deep tissue and Swedish massage. A deep tissue massage utilizes a lot of pressure and focuses on specific areas to stimulate circulation and the body's natural rebuilding process. Swedish techniques require very little pressure and cover a larger area.

Like most good things in life, my massage had to come to an end. My body was much more relaxed and my muscles were no longer aching. I felt like a new person.

The Spa at East Wind is perfect for every occasion. Whether you are looking for someplace to go for the day with the ladies or overnight with your significant other, go to the Inn and Spa at East Wind. There is an extensive list of treatment for both males and females including hand and feet, facial, and body treatments and range in price from $18 to $110. Beauty, relaxation, and pampering awaits you at the Spa at East Wind.

East Wind is located at 5720 Route 25A in Wading River, NY. Visit their website theinnateastwind.com or call them at 631-846-2339.

Dan's North Fork

A friendly undertaker character from the 50s show 'The Life of Riley' was chosen to be the namesake of this restaurant may be surprising, but there is nothing funereal about this well established restaurant situated on Riverhead's Main Street with lots of free parking behind it. Over the years, the place had come to be known by all as 'Diggers', so when Stephen Wirth took over ownership last year, with his wife, after having worked there for several years, the name was officially changed to the shorter version.

The restaurant gives a welcoming feel as you enter, and many of the staff are friends and family, very appropriate for an Irish themed establishment, although Stephen is quick to point out that this is not an Irish pub (great though they are). Digger's objective is to offer a wide range of well prepared food using fresh local ingredients wherever possible with a high consistent level of quality and service. Of course there is a well appointed bar where you can relax and sample a very wide range of beers and other drinks. The main restaurant section of Digger's seats around 65 at well-spaced tables with comfortable chairs. The menu is very extensive and this is a minor 'problem' Stephen is trying to address. However, dishes from the Daily Specials list are often requested again by the large core of regular patrons, so the menu can grow, almost of its own volition!

We chose to start with one of our favorites, steamed mussels but here Executive Chef, Rick DeLuca, adds an Irish touch by steaming them in Guinness and then finishing them with garlic and cream. This works surprisingly well and the slight residual Guinness flavor makes an interesting contrast to the delicate mussel taste. This dish is really recommended for mussel lovers, especially if, great as they are, you have become a little jaded by the ubiquitous white wine or marina sauces that so often are used in the preparation. Baked clams are another staple of many menus but here Rick prepares 'Father Solan Baked Clams' that are out of this world. They are made from clams, of course, but the addition of shrimp, clams and crabmeat together with herbs and spices and then being broiled with scampi butter produced the most delectable baked clams we have eaten anywhere. I don't know who Father Solan is, or was, but he deserves our thanks!

It is impossible to explore all of the range of beef, chicken and pork dishes, pastas, salads, seafood, burgers, sandwiches, wraps and Irish specialties on offer but you could have a lot of fun on multiple repeat visits working your way through the choices.

We chose to sample Digger's Surf & Turf from the daily specials list and were delighted with the perfectly cooked seafood stuffed half lobster that came with some of the most succulent Danish baby back ribs you could imagine. Digger's also is renowned for their Prime Rib and the 'medium' size portion turned out to be a very large cut of really tasty properly roasted juicy meat that fully deserved the title of 'Prime.' Served with delectable au jus drippings and some local corn and a baked potato this was an excellent choice and is highly recommended to all you carnivores out there. As a slight aside, it is indicative of their stress on quality that two simple but often poorly cooked items were immaculately presented. The corn was al dente and full of the sweetness that only Long Island corn has and the humble baked potato that so often turns up on the plate soggy and steamed, here had a crisp skin that demanded to be eaten and a floury interior that soaked up butter and salt and would have made any true Irishman proud.

Frankly, by this time we had no space left for anything else other than a refreshing sorbet and a coffee but for dessert lovers there are plenty of choices from cheesecakes to pies and beyond.

Digger's is open for lunch and dinner seven days a week from 11:30 a.m. onwards. Appetizer and soup prices range from $2.50 to $10.95; Entrees from $14.95 to $26.95 (for the admirals platter of fish and shellfish) – the great prime rib is only $22.95 for the King Cut (we could barely manage the Queen!) and with the entrees you get soup or salad, potato or rice and vegetables. They have a small but good value wine list to go with the wide range of beers.

Digger's is a great place for a party, formal or informal (they also have a separate party room) and also is a great place to just drop into because you will always find something, large or small on the menu to tempt your appetite. The service is friendly and professional and the food is of excellent quality and value.

PARKER SPEAKS!

The July, 2006 issue of Robert Parker's Wine Advocate has produced the first major, in-depth review of North Fork wines.

THE LENZ WINERY, PECONIC

- 2001 Cabernet Sauvignon: 88
- 1999 Cuvee: 89
- 2004 Gewurztraminer: 86
- 2003 Gewurztraminer: 87
- 2001 Merlot "Estate Selection": 89
- 1997 Merlot "Old Vines": 90

Microbiologist Eric Fry came from California two decades ago on the recommendation of Andre Tchelistcheff to the Dr. Konstantin Frank Winery and a few years later came to Long Island and Lenz, where as one of the region's veteran winemakers, he is nowadays also much in demand as a consultant. Fry's devotion to Gewurztraminer – and to the estate's oldest vines, planted in 1979 – is evident in his enthusiasm and his success with them. The Lenz 2004 Gewurztraminer displays so much peppermint and cress in the nose and such an exuberant juiciness of fruit acidity on the palate that I first thought "Sauvignon Blanc." Celery seed and lychee aromas more typical of this variety as well as a hint of textural creaminess emerge as the wine takes on air, along with a tactile brown spice element and a salty note in the surprisingly juicy finish. At least for his microclimate, Fry asserts, "By the time Gewurz is ready to pick, the acid is gone, the pH is four, it's falling apart," and consequently he adds acid. I must say that in this instance it has been adeptly done. Lenz opines that the more typical rose petal and spice of this variety will emerge after a few more months in the bottle. If the 2004 pulls in a Sauvignon direction, Lenz's 2003 Gewurztraminer exhibits a rather Pinot Gris-like aroma of peaches and wood smoke along with subtle rose petal and lychee notes. The palate impression here is fuller and creamier than in the 2004 and the savory finish meatier and spicier. The Lenz Chardonnay style, incidentally, eschews the cheap tricks of tropical fruit and toasted oak for fresh pit fruit and citrus with subtle oak and rich lees integration. One component I tasted of their 2005 Chardonnay – the wine had not yet been assembled – displayed positively Chassagne-like jellied red fruit aromas. Another strong specialization of Fry's is méthode champenoise. "I used to make red Pinot Noir in good years and it was mediocre. In bad years, I'd make bubbly – and it was wonderful," he says by way of explanation. His 1999 Cuvée – of 70% Pinot Noir and 30% (barrel-fermented, full malo) Chardonnay and disgorged only after five years – is surprisingly dominated by citrus, white peach, cherry, and herb notes which proved also to be present in stir samples of 100% Blanc de Noir. In short the expression of Pinot here is quite white wine-like. The palate is at once creamy and bracing, with a pure, herb-laced white peach finish.

Since getting Cabernet Sauvignon entirely ripe here is an iffy proposition often requiring crossed fingers well into November, Fry has adopted a style of Cabernet that emphasizes fruit and minimizes tannin. He then blends with Merlot, a variety much more likely in Long Island to exhibit abundant and ripe tannins. In effect then, the roles familiar from Bordeaux or Napa are reversed, with Merlot playing Cabernet to the Cab's Merlot. The 2001 Cabernet Sauvignon, incorporating around 15% Merlot, offers aromas of cassis, black cherry, and hints of tobacco. The wine's medium-to-full-bodied palate, too, is dominated by juicy crushed black fruits that carry into a finish of verve and intensity. Fry calls this "chunky" Cabernet by estate standards, but I find it suave and satisfying right now, even if a few years may add complexity. The 2001 Merlot "Estate Selection" is pure Merlot and announces its self-reliance on entering the palate with meaty, marrowy richness, firm tannins, medium to full body, and an abundance of ripe tomato, beet root, and black cherry fruit. The grilled tomato and meat aspects of the wine dominate in the aroma. The finish builds satisfyingly with iodine, black fruit, meat, and sweet herbal notes. Lenz draws comparisons with a 1995 Merlot which – among several older vintages I had the privilege to taste on this occasion – was especially mineral, deep, and vibrant with remarkably youthful fruit. Speaking of older vintages, some of the 1997 Merlot "Old Vines" may still be in commercial circulation, a wine that will convince tasters doubtful of Long Island's potential. Liqueur-like black cherry, wood smoke, and new leather scents introduce a quite thick, dense, and polished palate of black fruits and herbs – ripe, yet without any superficial sweetness. A long and involved finish featuring roasted meats, black fruits, and high-toned herbal essences provides great satisfaction. There would be no harm in cellaring this for a few more years.

DAN'S TRAVELS

book review: two time by chris knopf

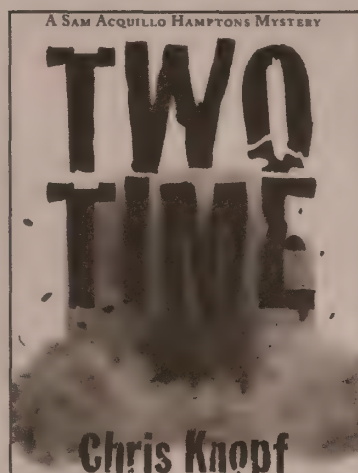

In the opening chapter of Chris Knopf's second novel, Two Time, the reluctant hero, Sam Acquillo, sits patiently at a waterside restaurant in East Hampton, sipping his vodka on the rocks, waiting for his friend, Jackie, to show up. The people and surroundings are depicted with needle sharp precision – the white light clarity of detail that is etched in the memory just prior to a catastrophic event. Sam sees it unfold, without fully registering the implications until it's almost too late. It is a stunning, disturbing opening.

Two Time is a follow up to Knopf's well received first book, The Last Refuge, published in 2005 by The Permanent Press, about which Marilyn Stasio (New York Times) said: "The characters are such original oddballs and their conversation so bracing, you want to kick off your shoes and spend some time on the porch with them." Most of the same cast of characters crowd into Two Time, with the addition of a gangster, his two meathead thugs, a wan, agoraphobic widow and an artist and his entourage who could give the word eccentric a whole other meaning, even in the Hamptons.

Lovers of the mystery genre have certain basic requirements: an authentic setting; a credible, intriguing protagonist; sharp dialogue and a rattling good plot to keep the pages turning. Knopf supplies all four in abundance. The idiosyncratic hero is a man whose ambition it is to sit quietly in his Adirondack chair, his dog Eddie at his feet, watching the sun set over Little Peconic Bay, and focus serious attention on his vodka consumption. This laudable plan has a way of being interrupted by various murders or attempted murders. If it weren't for his friendship with a few fellow locals, the town cop

Joe Sullivan, the philosopher/bartender at the Pequot, Paul Hodges, and his old pal and lawyer, Jackie Swaitkowski (my favorite from The Last Refuge), he might have been able to stay out of trouble. However, these characters, plus his insatiable curiosity, propel him to become mired deeper and deeper in the murder investigation.

One of the great pleasures of both books is the clever, staccato dialogue. Knopf has a pitch perfect ear and you find yourself smiling as you read the quick come-back lines. Another is that whatever Sam tackles, whether it's an addition to the Little Peconic Bay cottage where he was raised, untangling the intricacies of complex financial transactions or tinkering with his 1967 Pontiac Grand Prix with a modified 400 cubic inch V8 (whatever that is), you have confidence that Knopf knows precisely what he is talking about. Sam is very observant: for instance he notices, on a visit to Riverhead, the miles of sod fields growing beside the highway, ready to be cut like huge tiles and laid square by square for an instant, perfectly even, green grass carpeting in front of wealthy new mega mansions. His description of a sail in Hodges boat is evocative but unsentimental: "The light delivered by the Canadian air was hard and brittle, but would deepen as the sun burned up and swept away the morning haze. The tall grasses that filled the marshland that bordered the pond swayed in the wind and the cormorants were lining up along the booms of the boats moored in the pond to dry out their wings and crap white graffiti all over the blue and tan sail covers." Knopf convinces you that he knows how to unfurl a jib, winch the halyard to raise the sail and make his way from Little Peconic Bay, avoiding the messy race around the tip of Jessup's Neck, to bring the boat safely into dock in Sag Harbor. Anyone who lives or summers regularly in the Hamptons will recognize that his feel for the locale, from the beauty of the light filtered through the abundant foliage, to descriptions of an upscale art auction and also of rather rattier venues, is dead-on.

And then there's Amanda, a cool, beautiful woman who Sam is crazy about but can't quite trust. She hasn't always been exactly above board. Is she two-timing him? Or does the title refer to some other situation? As the plot unfolds, it is up to Sam to fit the seemingly irrational pieces together. But he's an old hand at solving problems and you can have confidence that however convoluted, he'll unravel this one.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

Damn Ticks..... Dam Pond

I visited the Sarnoff Preserve (2 miles south of Riverhead) last week. I needed to re-paint the white rectangular blazes on a section of Paumanok Path. It had been four years since I last painted this section and the blazes were fading rapidly. The trail travels through woods of oak and pine with an understory predominantly of blueberry, huckleberry, and the bushy low-growing scrub oak. The low bushy growth encroaches the trail this time of year and sets up a perfect scenario for hikers to pick up ticks. In anticipation of this risk, I treated my sneakers, white socks, and white pants with permethrin (a strong insecticide). I tucked my pants into my socks and started painting. I figured that I would get some trail work done and write about this hike for my article, but when I looked down at my pants there was a puff of dots on my pants. I have seen these tiny red mobilized dots before. They will continue to travel until they find exposed skin. Each one leaves a bite that creates a welt that will itch for a whole month. Normally, these "larval lone star ticks" gather at the ends of leaves and twigs. As you brush against the leaves that they're piled on, they transfer, "en masse", to your clothes. At first they look like a drop of liquid, then they spread out and look like a light puff of paint. Five or ten minutes after they've made contact, they are spread out so thinly that unless you look really carefully, you won't see them at all.

I was petrified that some of these tiny terrors would get past my defenses. I was picking up thousands of them; it looked as if my pants had been splashed with mud. I was astonished to then see the "mud" dripping off my pants. The dots were constricting instead of spreading out. The larval ticks were crawling on top of each other to keep away from my permethrin-treated pants. They were creating drops just like the ones that grabbed onto my pants, only this time they were dripping off; a residue of dead, almost microscopic tick larvae was left behind. I was relieved by this turn of events and finished blazing the trail in the westbound direction. Even though I managed not to get a single bite because of the precautions I took, I decided that I would wait and describe this hike for you at a later date; either after a couple of frosts have slowed the ticks down or a maintenance crew clears the brush away from the path.

After my frightening experience in the Sarnoff Preserve, I decided to look for a safer place to hike. I remembered walking the trails by Laurel Lake on the North Fork. These trails are stewarded by the Peconic Land Trust and they are well maintained with a wide treadway. I checked my website for PLT events and found a "Wetland Exploration at Dam Pond Maritime Reserve." These 140 acres have been protected through a cooperative effort with private land owners, the PLT, the Town of Southold, and Suffolk County. I remembered visiting this trail last year and the wide, well-trimmed trail was appealing after my experience earlier in the week. I traveled east through East Marion on Route 25. It was only after I drove by the scenic pond on the left that I realized I had passed the entrance to the Reserve. The event was organized by the PLT and a Cornell sides. A couple of short trails take you to the shore of the pond affording a stunning view towards the Sound. I was particularly impressed by the red trail; it's a well-executed trail through a hardwood forest. What a treat to experience several diverse ecological communities in such close proximity. In a matter of minutes, the trail takes you from salt and freshwater wetlands to a copse of red cedars and woods of oak and hickory.

PS - If you are worried about ticks, participating in a trails group sponsored hike is your best bet. Hike leaders preview their hikes before leading them and won't take hikers on heavily infested trails.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

This was one of the busiest weekends ever. The traffic was unbelievable and the cyclists on the roads made it a nightmare. Someone should let them know how dangerous it is to ride the non-designated-bike-lane roads.....Maybe they were biking to town to shop! Let's do some summer shopping!

For something unique in jewelry, at Jamie Jewellery Design of London at 675 Dune Road in Westhampton Beach you will find just that. There will be a "European Designer Jewellery (yes, that's how it's spelled in Europe) Show and Sale" on their new 2006 fall collection. The sale will take place on Friday, August 25 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. I'm there!

Hampton Bays is a great shopping town with lots to offer. I found a great sale at Fandango on West Montauk Highway that boasts 20% off with their "Annual Summer Sale" which is now in progress and will be until August 31. All the items come in many colors and sizes, after all; pets have favorites too!

Cool Fashion

Now, I like hot weather, but last week was just too hot. Days that linger in the nineties like that beg the question: what do you wear when even your skin feels too heavy? What material could possibly feel comfortable against melting skin? What style can restore your self-confidence and vitality through all that sweat? Even going naked is out on days like that; decency laws aside, the exposure to bare skin on intensely sunny days would be too dangerous. In fact, covering up can keep you cooler than showing off skin in shorts and tanks tops. If chosen correctly, a long sleeve, button down shirt can be cooler than a basic tee shirt.

So how do you chose correctly to ensure that a shirt like that will actually keep you cool? For starters, do not wear one that is cut too tightly. You want to wear loose fitting clothing in hot weather in order to allow airflow. And on days this hot you want all the breeze you can get, including the breeze inside your shirt.

For women, a smart, crisp, but loose button down shirt also works. Luckily a top like that goes great with a pair of those longer length shorts that are in this summer. Short shorts find their way onto the streets and runways every year, but this year they find themselves in competition with long shorts. These shorts hit at the knee or just above. Many have a straight leg cut. Because this cut means the shorts do not hug too tightly around the knee, the length allows the airflow you want.

The longer leg of these shorts, like the longer sleeve of these shirts, will provide better protection from the rays of the sun, leaving less area exposed to burn. Loose coverage will also act like an immediate shade for your skin and keep it cooler that way.

The marrying of these two keep-cool tips can be seen in one of the year's favorite trends: peasant skirts. Women could be considered the lucky ones this summer since these skirts are not only trendy, but also effective in hot weather. The skirts are long enough to shield your legs from the sun. They are also very wide and flowy, providing beautifully breezy air circulation.

The other thing that makes the peasant skirt so cool (temperature speaking) is material. Material is a strong deciding factor in whether or not a garment will keep you cool. Most peasant skirts tend to be made of fairly thin, lightweight cotton. This works for peasant skirts, but sometimes cotton is not so friendly. While cotton is a fabric that breathes, it is also a fabric that drinks. Cotton absorbs moisture very well, but it also is good at retaining it. This can work to a benefit or disadvantage. If you are worried about sweat, cotton may not be the best choice as it will retain and flaunt the moisture. In that case you may want to look into wicking material. These synthetic materials are designed to wick moisture away from the skin and towards the outside of the garment. These materials are particularly useful in socks, especially if you enjoy spending your summer hiking and biking.

On the other hand, cotton's absorbing qualities can also be a benefit. If you find yourself out biking or hiking or kayaking, etc. on a dangerously hot day, you can wet a cotton tee shirt and wear it. The shirt will take a while to dry out, and until it does, the evaporation of the water in the shirt against your skin will keep you cool.

As for other materials, there is always the old summer staple: linen. Two to three times stronger than cotton, linen is the strongest vegetable fiber. More specifically it is made from flax. Like cotton, linen absorbs moisture very well, but where it surpasses cotton is in its ability to quickly lose that moisture again. It absorbs the moisture, thus removing perspiration from the skin. However linen is a fairly stiff fabric and does not cling to the skin. When it billows away from the skin it gives itself time to dry and lose the moisture it gained. This ensures it keeps its place as a summer favorite for keeping cool.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

Stems, 8 Main Street, Sag Harbor 631-725-6800

A brand new home décor store has recently opened in beautiful downtown Sag Harbor (next to the Cigar Bar). The shop stocks beautiful home decorating items, including candles, live orchids and fine china by Sieger, and many other unusual items. Particularly well known for its freeze-dried flower arrangements, these exquisite and unique floral designs are a big hit with the yacht crowd and among decorators. The dried floral arrangements start with fresh flowers, which are freeze dried, then dyed, which allows them to keep their color without fading or changing. Proprietor Gillian Harding has owned shops in Los Angeles and New York City, bringing to Sag Harbor a perfect venue for unique merchandise.

EAST END KID: HAPPY BIRTHDAY AOKI

By Emily Hart Post
With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David
Post

Some kids get big birthday parties. Aoki Lee had a birthday party attended by hundreds of kids and parents, with all kinds of cool rides and games and stuff. It was really a benefit for the Bridgehampton Child Care Center, which helps kids out here. The party was held at the East Hampton home of hip-hop mogul Russell Simmons and Kimora Lee. I started with the games, and I won some prizes. Then the kids and I watched a puppet show, then we listened to cool songs from Laughing Pizza, who I remember from a Dylan's Candy Bar kids event. After lunch I did some rides, including the big slide, with my friend Harrison. It was hot outside but a cool party. There was a sweet ending. Dad won a raffle for a party (for me I hope) at Dylan's Candy Bar.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

BETTY PARSONS AT SPANIERMAN GALLERY

While it seems unusual to compare Jimmy Ernst and Betty Parsons (after all, both artists were subjects of recent/current shows at East Hampton's Spanierman Gallery) it seems appropriate to do so, anyway.

At least according to this critic. First, both Ernst and Parsons were influenced by Native American culture regarding the iconic images that they used. (Consider Parsons' "Teeth of the Temple," for example.) Ronny Cohen's comments, which accompany Parsons' present exhibit, indicate Chinese influences as well; one work by Ernst also recalls calligraphy.

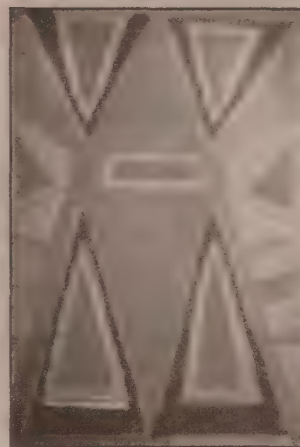

Admittedly, these similarities are coincidental and perhaps even incidental to the artists' essential qualities. What's intriguing about both Ernst and Parsons, however, is their range of subject matter and themes; their compelling attraction to cosmic concerns and sense of place.

Such a penchant for place is apparent in Ernst's art. One painting reminded yours truly of a mid-west scene signifying isolation; another one recalled an alleyway in some foreign locale.

Parsons' "Tropical Garden, Mississippi" is also a good example, conveying a strong connection not only between the artist and subject but also between the work and viewer. Because the style is abstract, the on-looker must work to fill-in-the-blanks, to create his/her own sense of setting. But the effort is worth it as the tropical greens of surrounding trees and hot reds of fragrant blossoms produce a sensual symphony.

"Mexican Memories" is another work evoking a particular locale; again, its abstract design, patterns, and color drawing the spectator into the painting, provoking the imagination. Our mind begins to wander as we place ourselves in the center of the action, embraced by smells, sounds, and sights.

Our willingness to indulge ourselves in Parsons' world reinforces another statement by Ronny Cohen suggesting that Parsons' titles (and by extension, her art) encouraged viewers to look for subjects or meaning, that her titles and works "spark associations."

"Teeth of the Temple,"
by Betty Parsons

This appears to be one of Parsons' most salient strengths; such an observation also "sparks" the idea that "Reception Theory" may very well be operating here. (It's a concept, now out of fashion and not particularly new, that meaning is determined in art endeavors when viewers bring their own associations, experience and expectations to a particular work.)

While it seems irrelevant to name a cinematic example (how people may be "receiving" Oliver Stone's movie, World Trade Center, considering the real-life September 11), Parsons' apparently recognized the importance of viewer involvement.

The exhibit will be on view at Spanierman Gallery until Sept. 11.

HONORING THE ARTIST: KEN RICHARDS

This week's cover artist, Ken Richards, is a man who finds important connections between a myriad of disciplines and experiences.

Consider, for example, his background as a musician, biology teacher and artist. While they seem dissimilar on the surface, Mr. Richards talks about his aesthetic principles, particularly light and shadows, by referencing scientific descriptions.

Asked about how music plays a part in his art, he quickly sees a bond. Most salient, perhaps, is the astute and heartfelt similes he uses to compare music and art to breathing and traveling to water.

The following conversation explicates these issues.

Q: How is the cover painting, "Salt Marsh at Sunset" typical or not typical of your work?

A: First of all, it's typical of my style, Impressionism. Or painterly realism. It also represents my passion for light and shadow, where magic truly occurs. This work is a scene from South Dartmouth, Massachusetts, but a lot of my landscapes are inspired by Mykonos in Greece where I spend one-third of the year.

Q: What was it about Greece that inspired you to paint, besides the obvious reasons?

A: When I started to paint 13 years ago, I did three pieces and took photographs of them. I went to Greece (my mother was from Athens) and was showing the pictures to my best friend, another artist, in a bar. A woman there, who was an interior decorator from Toronto, leaned over and said, "Is that for sale?" She made an offer, and I've been painting and selling ever since.

Q: You've said that you are drawn to light and shadow. How is the light, for example, different in Greece?

A: Of course, light is different in Greece from light in New England. The object isn't different, but what happens to the light as it reaches my eye: the amount of wind, moisture, angle of the sun, light refraction. All these elements play a part. But I'm not trying to recreate a scene; I'm trying to share light and shadow.

Q: How about other influences on your aesthetics. Music, for instance, and other artists?

A: I listen to music when I paint. My impressions are moved by rhythms. Music is like inhaling; art is like exhaling. They are essential to life.

As far as other artists, Monet, especially, has influenced me. I will always remember a simple bit of information he said: "When you see blue, paint blue. The object will take care of itself." Picasso also said something important: "Mimic who you love. You will fail, but in your failure, you will have your own style."

Q: I know you travel a lot and not just to Greece. How has that also influenced you?

A: The most important aspect of traveling is the people you meet. You can see a lot on your journeys, the Pyramids, for example, but you can't replace people. Traveling is like water; it's that essential for survival.

Q: Any final words?

A: If what I'm doing isn't fun and interesting, I won't do it.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

preview: stars read at guild hall... by jan silver

The John Drew Theater's final 10 days of summer programming really brings out the pros. Alec Baldwin, Eli Wallach, Harris Yulin, and Lizbeth Mackay perform a concert reading of Arthur Miller's dramatic 1968 play The Price tonight. Two award-winning poets, Sharon Olds and Harvey Shapiro, read from their new-work on Sunday at 4 p.m. Anita Gillette heads the cast in a staged reading of Lucy Boyle's From the Diary of Miss Villiana M. Ferrars on Monday evening. And Playwrights Theatre of East Hampton caps the summer series with a staged reading of the new comedy Russian Romance starring Mercedes Ruehl and Tandy Cronyn on September 3.

Arthur Miller is one of our defining playwrights. His work explores the social and psychological underpinnings of American society, and there are layers of meaning for every generation in his plays. His best-known works – Death of a Salesman, The Crucible, All My Sons, A View from the Bridge – were written in the 1940s and 1950s, so The Price represented a comeback for him.

Two estranged brothers – one a policeman, the other a successful surgeon – meet to settle the estate of their father. The long-ago dreams, desires and resentments of the siblings are rekindled – and somewhat mediated and commented upon by an old furniture dealer who is there to purchase pieces from the estate. The Price can be taken on several levels: what it has cost each brother to live his life the way he chose, and the actual price the dealer is willing to pay for old furniture.

Alec Baldwin portrays the policeman, Victor Franz. Harris Yulin directs this performance and plays the wealthy older brother Walter Franz. Lizbeth Mackay plays Esther Franz, Victor's wife. Eli Wallach, still hale and hearty at 91, plays the furniture dealer, Gregory Solomon. The staged reading is tonight at 8 p.m. and tickets ($18-$20) are available at the Guild Hall box office (631-324-4050).

On Sunday afternoon, two noted contemporary poets read from their new collections. Sharon Olds, former New York State poet laureate and a professor at NYU's Graduate Creative Writing Program, will read from her new book Strike Sparks. She is known for her clear, musical, emotional and humorous writing. Former New York Times Magazine and Book Review editor, Harvey Shapiro, is also a long-time poet. His writing is wise, concise, humorous and, at times, reverential. A part-time East Hampton resident, Shapiro's latest collection is Sights Along the Harbor. There is a reception with the writers following the reading, and there is no admission charge, but a $5 donation to Guild Hall is suggested.

Actress Lucy Boyle, a recent graduate of the Brown University/Trinity Rep program headed by award-winning playwright Paula Vogel, brings her very unusual Victorian play From the Diary of Miss Villiana M. Ferrars to the John Drew stage this coming Monday evening. Villiana Ferrars is a 13-year-old Brit living in Victorian England with a very strict father. She expresses her frustration and anger against the circumstances in her life by setting fires. The play will be read by Broadway star Anita Gillette (regularly seen on TV as Marg Helgenberger's mother on "CSI"), Kate Mueth and James Lawson, and directed by actress Miriam Silverman. Tickets are $18-$20 at the box office or online at www.guildhall.org.

Playwrights Theatre of East Hampton, which co-produced two Murray Schisgal one-acters starring Judd Hirsch, Estelle Parsons and Lewis J. Stadlen at the end of July, will present Murphy Guyer's new immigration comedy Russian Romance on Sunday evening, September 3. The plot complication involves a Russian couple trying to get their green cards. The staged reading stars Mercedes Ruehl and Tandy Cronyn.

Playwrights Theatre always invites the playwright, director and cast onstage after the performance for a brief Q&A with the audience. Tickets are $18-$20.

The John Drew Theater has been busy every night since June 30. It still has at least two major bookings after Labor Day. Cabaret favorites KT Sullivan and Mark Nadler will sing and dance through their latest show "A Fine Romance: The Dorothy Fields Songbook" on September 16, and the Hamptons International Film Festival has seminars and screenings October 19 to 22.

IT'S NO SURPRISE PEOPLE ARE HESITANT IN BUYING A NEW HOME

It's no surprise people are hesitant in buying a new home until they sell their existing one because they need the cash from the sale for the down payment.

A little known finance program combines both homes under one loan. This releases the equity from the existing home for use as the down payment on the new home without having to sell the existing home first. You may not even need any additional cash toward the new home as long as you have a strong equity position in your existing one.

You're probably thinking that the new mortgage payments may be too high to carry, but not so. This new loan has payments that are almost half of conventional loan payments, which makes it easy to carry the new loan until the existing home is sold and the new loan balance is paid down.

The payments can be recalculated to reflect the lower balance, without the cost of refinancing. This gives you the time you need to get top dollar on the sale of your existing home while giving you the power to get a great deal on your trade up home. So you can put the cart before the horse or in this case the house.

The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corporation, has made a free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available, which can be easily obtained by calling their Toll Free number. Entertainment In The Hamptons preview: evidence dance company

This Saturday, August 26th at the Nova's Ark Project, 60 Millstone Road, Bridgehampton, the Evidence Dance Company will return for the 3rd Annual Performance Gala, "On Our Toes in the Hamptons."

The Evidence Dance Company is in its 20th year of bringing their emotional and rhythmic performances to audiences across the country. The group was founded by dance legend Ronald K. Brown and fuses contemporary jazz and ballet with African and Caribbean cultural influences. Brown, who will be performing a stirring solo dance at the benefit, has been called "one of the most profound choreographers of his modern dance generation." Brown has said of the Company and the performances, "I want people to have their spirits lifted." Anyone who attends the "On Our Toes" gala will be assured of that.

The festivities begin with cocktails and a silent auction for luxury items and unique experiences at 4 p.m. and the dance performance is at 5:30 p.m. The event is the brainchild of Susan L. Taylor, author and Editorial Director at Essence Magazine, and Reginald Van Lees, Sr. V.P. Booz Allen Hamilton. Three years ago, the idea of bringing Black culture to the Hamptons was just a dream for them, now the gala is the only continuous and major African American cultural event of the Hamptons summer season. This year CBS' "The Early Show" co-anchor, Rene Syler, will be the event's emcee.

The tropical theme is sure to thrill, as will the delicious food. While the performances by the Evidence Dance Company will undoubtedly be the main attraction, the intermission will be filled by an exciting auction for luxurious items. Audrey Smaltz, guru and CEO / Founder of The Ground Crew, will be the auctioneer for great items including a pair of elegant watches and a diamond pendant necklace.

The dance performance titled "Truth Don Die" will start at 5:30 and is performed in three parts, starting with the uplifting "Your Steps Are Ordered." The second segment is entitled "Clear as Tear Water" with the founder, Ronald K. Brown's solo performance with accompanying music sung by Jazz great, Cassandra Wilson. The closing dance is "Truth Don Die" and tells the story of a man who travels the world spreading the word of God. He survives a car accident in Nigeria, through God's grace and sees that his life is an example of God's blessings. This story is told beautifully and eloquently through dance.

To close the performance the entire company will dance in their signature piece, "Grace." It is the story of a Woman God who comes down to earth to remind everyone of God's grace.

As if these performances weren't enough to draw guests, the event also boasts delicious, home-style African and Caribbean food, wine sorbets, and even a specially created cocktail called "The Pirouette" for the event. The art complex of Nova's Ark will be elegantly decorated with orchids and dried flowers. Many local businesses have contributed to the success of this event and it is something that many locals are passionate about.

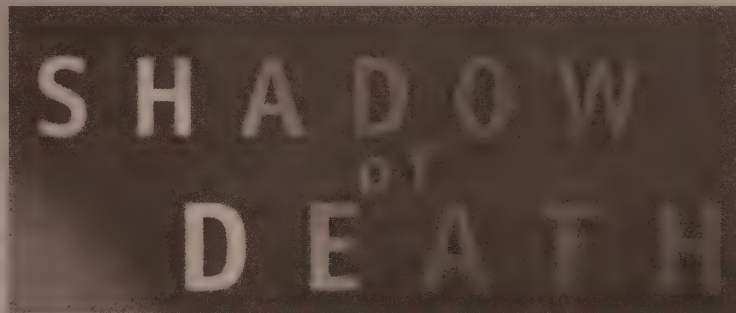

Honorary Chairs for the Gala are Susan L. Taylor and Khephra Burns. Gala Chairs are Joyce Mullins-Jackson and Loida N. Lewis, Vice Chairs are Gayle Perkins-Atkins, Charles Atkins, Sandra and Don Cornwell, and Debra L. Lee.

Corporate Sponsors include Avon Products Inc., BET Networks, Booz Allen Hamilton, Crawford Street Partners, LLC, Mitchell Madison Group, Prudential Financial, Veuve-Clicquot, and Belvedere. Hamptons.com is the media sponsor.

Forget about those boring, stuffy, and uptight benefit galas of the summertime. The laid-back, Caribbean-themed, "On Our Toes in the Hamptons" event is going to be something different. It will be delicious, entertaining, and captivating. This is sure to be one of the most memorable events of the summer. Come out and actually enjoy yourself while participating in arguably the most important benefit of the year.

Individual tickets are $500 or buy a Sponsor Package on any level. The Platinum Package is $20,000, Gold Package $15,000 Silver $10,000, Bronze $5000 and Patron $2500. To purchase tickets call Eddie Marrero/ Evidence Dance Company 718-230-4633.

review: darwin in malibu... by jan silver

The final summer production at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, is the U.S. premiere of Crispin Whittell's comedy Darwin in Malibu. Yes, that Darwin – as in Charles, the scientist who wrote On the Origin of Species (1859). In fact, three of the four characters in the play are based on real people who knew one another and, by some Divine or other dimension's intervention, find themselves together again continuing their more than 100-year-old debate in Malibu, California.

Since Crispin Whittell is British and this comedy premiered in England, it is interesting to see the play is set in a contemporary Malibu beachfront home (another handsome Gary Hygom design anyone would be delighted to occupy). Darwin (Hal Linden) and a young American, Sarah (Anna Chlumsky), seem to be living the relaxed, carefree life there. Enter T.H. Huxley (Neal Huff), a physician, scientist and friend of Darwin who successfully defended Darwin's theory in a famous 1860 debate with Oxford bishop Samuel Wilberforce (Richard Easton).

They reminisce about old times a bit, which allows the playwright to get in a few key phrases and witty lines, planting hints of what's to come. For example, after Huxley retells the debate story, Darwin remarks, "Knowledge comes with a price" – meaning one might find out something they don't want to know.

Soon Sarah spots a man on the beach carrying lots of baggage (metaphor, metaphor!). It turns out to be

Anna Chlumsky and Hal Linden

Bishop Wilberforce, whose afterlife is now in Alabama – but he declares they're all really in purgatory and he wants them to go to heaven.

The debate between Huxley and Wilberforce begins anew while Darwin listens in amusement and Sarah occasionally echoes in perfect Valley Girl/Greek chorus-speak. This play of ideas has a wordy first act, but it is mildly amusing.

The second act is more interesting. The playwright has Darwin very neatly resolve the creation vs. evolution debate between Huxley and Wilberforce. He "proves" the two theories can peacefully co-exist. If God warned Adam in Genesis not to eat from the Tree of Knowledge – because He knew it would make Adam aware of his own death – and Adam did eat the apple.....then, Wilberforce blubbers, "Life isn't fair and it doesn't make sense!"

Well, neither does this play, but the second act moves a lot quicker than the first, and it's very enjoyable being in the company of fine actors who have exquisite comic timing and clear elocution. The play has some humorous lines about California, Las Vegas and heaven while also exploring the more serious topics of familial and sexual love, companionship and evolution.

In a program note, playwright Whittell writes he "envisioned an unapologetic play of ideas, which attempted to connect the head with the heart and to explore the apparently profound human need to believe." His four characters each have their separate comforting beliefs, some based on ideas (reason) and some on heart (emotions), but both inherent in us and, therefore, individually reconciled.

Daniel Gerroll directs the sterling cast with great pace. Richard Easton's Wilberforce gets most of the funniest lines and he voices them brilliantly with a straightforward and bewildered demeanor. Hal Linden is a charming Darwin, accepting what life and afterlife have dealt him. Neal Huff is still the earnest scientist Huxley, struggling to keep logic and emotion separate. Anna Chlumsky's nubile, young Sarah represents the beauty, softness and innocence possible on any plane of existence.

Gary Hygom's beach house set is simple, elegant, and inviting. David Weiner's lighting and Tony Melfa's sound design evoke the feel and sounds of the ocean. Amelia Baksic's costumes are clear keys to each character's personality. This is a co-production with Garry Marshall's Falcon Theatre of Burbank, California.

Darwin in Malibu plays Tuesday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., Sunday at 7 p.m., with matinees Wednesday at 2 p.m. and Saturday at 4 p.m. through September 3. Tickets ($45-$60) are sold at the Bay Street Theatre box office (631-725-9500) or online at www.baystreet.org. There is a new-play reading of Frank McGuinness' Gates of Gold at 2 p.m. on Sunday, August 27.

Dave Evans' MINI - MOVIE REVIEWS

Invincible

Mark Wahlberg stars in this true tale of the absolute underdog. A similar premise to Rock Star (also starring Wahlberg), the gripping story, though already done in every genre, is nonetheless fun and, dare I say, enjoyable. It's not everyday a bartender becomes a professional football player.

Beerfest

The name says it all. From the men that brought you Super Troopers comes this adventure of another type of underdog - American drinkers. Two brothers battle the world in a secret German drinking competition and the usual chaos follows. It is rated R for "pervasive crude and sexual content, language, nudity and substance abuse." You decide if you want to see it.

Snakes on a Plane

A crate of deadly snakes is set loose in an airplane in order to kill an eyewitness. Are you serious? Someone actually green-lighted this picture? Does Samuel Jackson even care about film anymore? I have an idea, Hanta on the Boat - mice infected with the Hantavirus are let loose on a boat in order to assassinate an Eastern European diplomat! I smell Oscar!

Material Girls

I ache just thinking about this drivel. Two sisters (Hillary and Haylie Duff) inherit their father's cosmetic company. It almost goes belly up, but instead of following the advice of the board of directors to sell out, they work hard and save the company. The plot is just like Tommy Boy but I laughed for all the wrong reasons.

Accepted

In the vain of Old School someone ends up starting something that spins wildly out of their control. Instead of thirtysomethings starting a fraternity at a college, we have a high school burnout, who couldn't get into college, creating one of his very own in order to fool his parents. Does he succeed? Does he get the girl (there's always a girl)? What do you think?

Pulse

In the style of The Grudge, The Ring and, ahem, Dark Water comes this remake of an eerie Japanese modern horror film. Here the concept is that wireless technologies have made a ghoulish connection with some dark spiritual world and predictably, many pretty young things must pay the price. Horror maestro Wes Craven provides the script.

World Trade Center

It's perhaps cynical to suggest that the only way Oliver Stone could claw his way back to something approaching public respect after the abysmal Alexander, was to make this film. The subject is critic-proof and Stone offers no stunning reinterpretation of events, choosing to make a solid, watchable but ultimately unexciting film.

Zoom

Must we force-feed our children such utter tripe? Tim Allen, long since cast out of the world of adult comedy, shows up here as a retired superhero who has to bring a bunch of unruly super-children into line at a superhero academy. Director Peter Hewitt, responsible for the ghastly Garfield as well as the script for Thunderbirds, is, if nothing else, at least consistent.

Step Up

Two kids, one from the wrong side of the tracks and the other from an elite private school, must team up together for a dance showcase, she to fulfill her professional dreams and he to fulfill his community service order. Ridiculous stuff but surprisingly emotional with great performances from the two leads and (albeit too minor) support from the ever-fantastic Rachel Griffiths.

Talladega Nights: The Ballad of Ricky Bobby

By now it's becoming clear that the Will Ferrell machine is truly unstoppable. Here he's a racer, fighting for supremacy in the rough and tumble world of NASCAR. There's a nasty sneer of snobbery behind some of the jokes and the whole affair is business as usual for Ferrell, but neither of those things stop this being very fun and, at times, very funny.

Barnyard

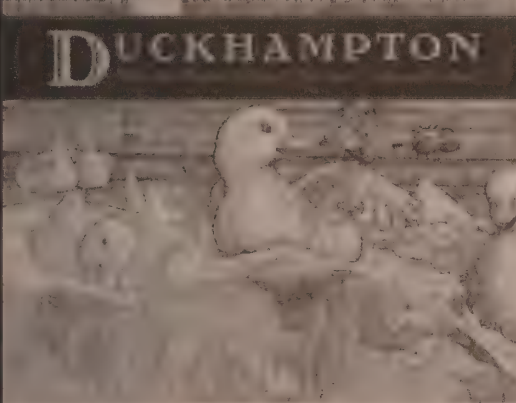

CGI-Celebrity-Voiceover-Bonanza! Courteney Cox! Danny Glover! Wanda Sykes! Andie... MacDowell! God, it's hard to get excited about CGI anymore and with a cast so clearly dredged from the bottom of the barrel it's as though Paramount isn't even trying. A farmer goes away leaving the farm animals to look after themselves! A kind of toothless Animal Farm, if you will.

The Descent

The British are not known for their skills as horror-makers but this gruesome and claustrophobic tale of caving gone horribly, horribly awry is really quite impressive. The cast of nubile young women who fall prey to the unexpected inhabitants of the cave are typical of such a film, but in the hands of director Neil Marshall (formerly of Dog Soldiers) the atmosphere is transformed into something electrifyingly dark.

The Night Listener

Adapted from Armistead Maupin's compelling novel, this tepid film sounds like another cry for help from the flagging Miramax. The plot focuses on a middle-aged writer who becomes involved in a charitable relationship with a young boy who claims to be terminally ill. Things get very dark, very quickly - but not in a cinematic way. The twists and turns of the novel have a literary rhythm that is mis-translated here into sentimental schlock.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

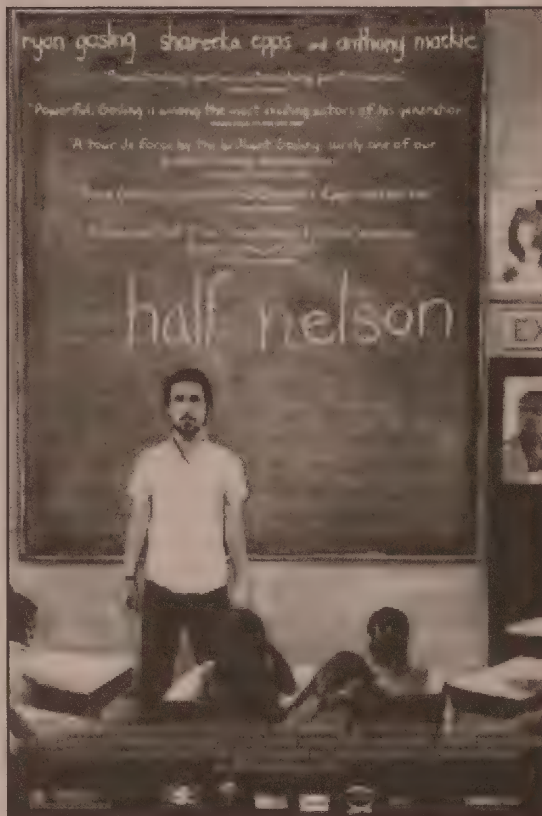

Moviegoers, and I've found that includes just about everyone, constantly grab my ear, especially knowing I have this funny job of seeing movies, thinking about them and then reporting on them. All those movie fans have quite decided ideas and are fiercely avid. So, when my ear gets grabbed, I listen. I'd rather lend an ear than lose it. Wouldn't it figure – I learn a lot!

My ear has been bent, almost out of shape, with the buzz of Half Nelson, a small, miniscule-budgeted film that is rich to satiation with gray matter used so meaningfully it totally avoids any of the easy dramatic cliches of Hollywood's sanctimony prevalent in the multitude of inspirational chronicles of a motivated young teacher (usually white) who is willing to work his or her tail off to give to deprived or difficult students (usually of color) wings to soar to heights of glory as scholars or sports heroes. Cable TV's TNT premiered one just last week. It was perfectly workable and nice, but didn't the electronic tube flicker with Yogi Berra's "deja vu, all over again?"

You can check off many of the requisite items given above for Ryan Fleck and Anna Boden's script for Half Nelson, but my association of their film to the many, many same-subject movies ends there. The writing, by the partners in life, is so tenderly honest in its depiction of everyday realism, unenforced by theatrical piety, it imbues its leading actors with the stuff dream movies are made of. Mr. Fleck also directs with the same skill, but I'm sure Ms. Boden was not simply standing by as this film was started a few years ago as a short-docudrama titled Gowanus, Brooklyn, where the movie was mostly shot. They have even managed to make the actual locations appear more real. It is possible that the remarkable performances, given by the principals, make it seem so, as they are so convincing and seamless in their integrity and integration as a complete entity with story and time and place.

Portraying the dedicated Brooklyn junior high school teacher, Dan Dunne, is Ryan Gosling, the Canadian-born actor already praised for remarkable past performances notably as the neo-Nazi in The Believer. He's a rare actor in that he gives a bravura performance which is at the same time unnoticeable. He subtly underplays his teacher's idealistic passion for his inner-city students by day and also as a totally dissolute, disillusioned crackhead by night, trudging ing unsteadily vial by vial, to a tragic end. Predictably, his drug hangovers follow him to school. He passes out in a school bathroom where he's discovered by a tough, black student. She is 13-year-old Drey, played by a remarkable new talent, Shareeka Epps. Drey sees his crack pipe and knows the situation well. Her brother is another customer of the mid-level dealer, Frank. One more well filled-out role, done by Anthony Mackie. Drey is cautious of the teacher, however. She gradually nudges a bit closer and closer until they are friends – he a Dutch uncle and she a willing student niece, earnest and calmly accepting of the teacher's ruinous condition; the despair and disengagement with what he thought of as righteous indignation of a stifling system. His parents had been "radical" activists in the 60s and now have opted for "political exile" in the preserving jar of pickling alcohol. Their son has chosen crack as his "live in peace" pain reliever.

In this politically fractured time when dissent of governmental policies bring about recrimination and retribution, most films are distributed as "politics free" most specifically, those based on September 11th events. How naïve. Half Nelson pushes one arm under the opponent's arm and the hand on the back of the neck of its foe and it applies pressure. It's good to know it is wrestling with the repressed and unspoken. This honest, simple story of a teacher and young student looks to the future. Encapsulated in the film is a news clip of student Mario Savio's 1964 statement at Berkeley, "..... the operation of the machine becomes so odious so sick at heart, you can't take part you've got to put your bodies on the gears and wheel. And, you've got to make it stop."

With energizing good spirit, you feel that one day, student and teacher might really fly.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The Hamptons Wine & Food Festival held the week-end of August 12 and 13 at the Ross School in East Hampton, was indeed a premier epicurean delight. Some of the best known faces in the food world, such as Hamptons own Ralph Pagano and Food Network's David Lieberman were on hand for this celebration of summer.

From noon on Saturday to 4 p.m. on Sunday, vintners from South and North Fork wineries held forth in various rooms at the school. Simultaneously, representatives of cutting edge Spanish and Italian wines and French champagnes were on-hand to discuss their products and offer tastings. I waltzed through the Grand Tasting Hall where I sipped a refreshing Wolffer Estate rosé, delighted in North Fork crispy potato chips, and downed luscious scallop ceviche with mango emulsion from Olde Speonk Inn.

In the gardens beyond the Grand Hall, chef Richard Lanza, of Passionfish in Westhampton Beach, and chef Matt Ross, of East Hampton Point, were set up on a Viking stage, in the final moments of their cooking competition. With the theme of "couch potato" – although not a potato was in sight – each chef prepared 3 dishes, wowing the judges who had a truly difficult time making a decision. In my opinion, both chefs were winners with a spectacular roasted corn soup by Richard, and a comforting but rich whole grain fluke BLT with Chardonnay mayonnaise by Matt.

A presentation by the Food Network's winsome star/chef Dave Lieberman followed the competition, captivating the audience as he whipped up delectable summer libations like watermelon nectar with vodka, an icy blender drink with berries and tequila and a Bloody Mary with local tomatoes, celery, lime and jalapeno. Dave teased his audience with descriptions of tastings that they couldn't wait to try at home.

RICHARD LANZA'S ROASTED CORN CHOWDER

Be sure to save the cobs after scraping the kernels from them to flavor the broth.

Serves 6

4 fresh local corns in their husks
5 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 medium Spanish onion, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 quart fresh cold tap water
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1/2 cup half and half
2-3 tablespoons fresh snipped chives

1. Pull back the husks of each corn and remove the silks. Replace the husks around the corns and soak them in cold water for 15-20 minutes. Drain the corn and dry them with paper towels as well as possible. Place the corns on a grill or under broiler, about 3-4 inches from source of heat. Cook the corn until lightly charred on all sides, about 2-3 minutes each side. Remove from heat and when cool enough to handle, remove and discard husks. Then, with a sharp knife, scrape the kernels from the cobs into a bowl. Reverse the knife to the dull side and scrape remaining milk from the cobs. Reserve the cobs.

2. Warm the oil in a large saucepan and "sweat" the onion and garlic, sautéing over low heat for several minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the water, corn cobs and salt and pepper to taste. Bring to the edge of a boil then simmer about 20 minutes and discard the cobs. Add the corn kernels and half and half and simmer for another 10 minutes or so. Taste for salt and pepper. Puree the mixture coarsely with a hand immersion blender. Can be prepared up to 2 days ahead. Reheat for serving, adjust seasoning to taste as necessary and garnish with fresh chives.

MATT ROSS' MULTI-GRAIN FLUKE BLT'S

Unless you're planning to open a bottle of Chardonnay or have one open, it's okay to substitute lemon juice to prepare this classic mayonnaise.

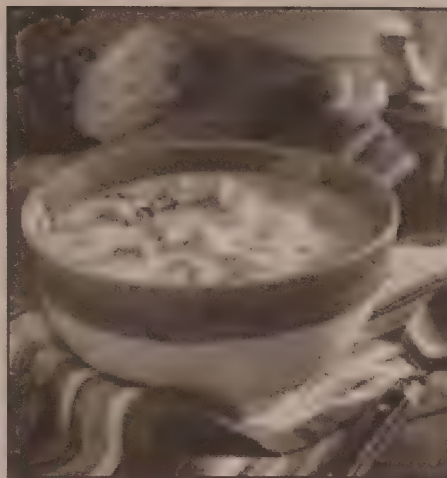

Serves 6

For the Chardonnay mayonnaise

2 egg yolks
1/2 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 small garlic clove, minced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
3 tablespoons Chardonnay – or 2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1/3 cup vegetable oil

For the sandwich

6 slices multi-grain bread
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 pound fluke or flounder fillets, about 4-ounce fillets for each serving
Flour for dusting, salt and pepper

3 ripe tomatoes, thinly sliced

Arugula leaves, washed and spin dried

18 slices bacon, cooked until crisp

1. Have all the ingredients for the mayonnaise at room temperature. In work bowl of food processor fitted with steel knife or in a blender, combine egg yolks, mustard, garlic, dash of salt and pepper and Chardonnay or lemon juice and process or blend for about 10 seconds. Pour oils into a measuring cup. With machine running, slowly start adding oils, drop by drop, through the feed tube of the processor or through opening in blender cap from a tablespoon at first. After you have added a few tablespoons, gradually pour remaining oil through the opening in a slow, steady stream until the emulsion of the eggs and oil is complete and the mayonnaise has thickened. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary.

2. Grill, broil or toast the bread slices and arrange on individual plates. Heat oil in a large skillet, dust fillets with flour on both sides and sauté in oil, about 3 minutes each side until lightly golden, without crowding the pan. Season fish lightly with salt and pepper and drain on paper towels. To assemble the sandwiches, divide tomato slices over the bread and top with Arugula, and then divide fish fillets equally over the greens. Top with 3 crisp bacon slices over each fish serving, then drizzle mayonnaise, as little or as much as you would like.

Note: Refrigerate any excess mayonnaise in a screw top jar for up to one week.

Dining in the Hamptons

The Best Seat in the House

This summer has flown past like a swelling river. Here we are, September staring us in the face. I apologize if I sound ominous, but it's times like this when I realize you've got to immerse yourself in the beauty when you can get it. As the long, lazy days of summer wane, I suggest that you pass on the stuffy, dark restaurants. There will be plenty of time to cozy up around a glass of red wine come November. For now, find the spots with the views, where the summer evening breeze can still play with your hair. It won't be long before the patios are closed up for the winter.

The other night, my friend Robin and I cruised over to Sag Harbor. We are rarely the big meal types. We were looking for something to snack on and something to sip on while we surrounded ourselves by something to meditate on. This evening, it was the harbor at dusk. We pulled up to The Beacon restaurant as the sun slipped towards the rippling water. The masts of sailboats bobbed, casting their reflections on the glowing water. We scurried up the wooden steps and onto the outdoor deck that doubles as a cocktail lounge for those who enjoy warm breaths of fresh air. The owner, David Lowenburg, came out to greet us like old friends. I noticed that he had that comfortable rapport with everyone who walked through the door. We chatted with him as he poured us each a glass of "Cuvee Tropical" Chardonnay from Channing Daughters. It was exactly the way I wanted to spend my evening – a chilled glass of crisp white wine on a balcony at sunset. Little did I know that David, in whose capable hands we put the rest of our evening, had even bigger plans for us. When he headed back to tend to the dining room (he is very hands-on at all three of his restaurants – Red/Bar in Southampton and Fresno in East Hampton are the other two) Robin and I grinned about our good luck in running into him this evening. Next thing we know, an order of tuna tartare, with capers, whole ground mustard and red curry paste, was placed in front of us. This was no little snackie-poo. This was the rarest of tuna practically swimming into our evening. When next we were sent a fantastic chopped salad with roasted peanuts and crispy shrimp, AND two orders of lobster rigatoni, heaped with chunks of claw and tail meat and fresh corn and basil, I almost fainted. Watching the stars emerge and the moon rise above the twinkling lights of the boats in the harbor made the night the perfect combination of refinement and simplicity. The Beacon, at 8 West Water Street in Sag Harbor, will be open Wednesday through Sunday all through September and will be serving on week-ends through the middle of October (631-) 725-7088.

If you're looking for something slightly more casual, you can always take a drive out to Montauk and dine on the rocky shores at Duryea's Lobster Deck at 65 Tuthill Road. This place is a quiet institution with no frills: just the freshest seafood and a wide expanse of sky and sea, over which to take in the sunset. Duryea is one of those places where you feel like a regular even if you only go once a summer. When you sit down at the plastic tables and tie on your plastic bib, you're in for another experiential meal. Duryea serves only outside, where two blue waters meet, and they offer some of the indisputably best seafood in town. There are multiple daily specials, abundant lobster rolls, and thick and chunky chowder. You feel spoiled by the natural beauty and the hush of the scene, and at the same time like you're at a family picnic. It's fresh, simple, down-home delicacy. Duryea's will be open daily, noon to 9 p.m. through Columbus Day weekend (631) 668-2410.

But for me, there is one view that cannot be topped. The best place to really soak up the summer nights is right down on the beach, in the sand. The other night, I went on the perfect date. Derek picked me up in the late afternoon, and we went and picked up steamed lobsters from Claws on Wheels at 17 Race Lane in East Hampton (631-324-9224). They cracked the lobsters for us, and we took them to Sagg Main Beach. We sat on a blanket, watching the sunset over Sagg Pond while the moon rose over the ocean behind us. We sucked the meat out of the fresh lobsters while the seagulls looked on, green with envy.

As the summer days dwindle, there's no time to be cooped up in a plush booth in a posh restaurant. Get your feet in the sand and enjoy the fruits of the ocean as the waves lap up towards your toes.

The Hampton Classic Preview

The Hampton Classic Horse Show, one of the nation's premier show jumping competitions, returns to Bridgehampton, Long Island, NY, for its 31st year with an exciting lineup of social events and equestrian competitions. The Hampton Classic Horse Show begins on Sunday, August 27 and culminates with the exciting $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix, on Sunday, September 3.

In the week leading up to the excitement of Grand Prix Sunday, more than 100 classes of competition will be featured in six rings. Riders ranging from Olympic stars to kids on ponies will all take their best shot at winning a coveted Hampton Classic blue ribbon. Highlights of the week include:

Monday, August 28

While there is no major jumping competition in the Grand Prix Ring, the Finals of the Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities will be the highlight on Monday, August 28. Spectators are also invited to come and watch horses and riders in schooling sessions and to shop in the Boutique Garden or visit the World of the Horse™ Exhibition Tent and Show Yard, where children can pet a llama or miniature horse and visit the rescued farm animals housed there. There is no admission charge on Monday.

Tuesday, August 29

Tuesday's events include Amateur-Owner, Junior, and Open Jumpers, and Green Working Hunters and Children's Hunters, as well as the $2,500 Marshall & Sterling Children's Hunter Classic and the USEF Show Jumping Talent Search.

The Grandstand

Jumping Derby, a qualifier for Sunday's $25,000 Calvin Klein Show Jumping Derby, followed by the $15,000 NTM Open Jumper Speed Derby and the $50,000 GREY GOOSE Vodka World Cup Qualifier, which sets the order for Sunday's $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix and is a qualifying event helping to determine which U.S. riders will ride in the 2007 FEI World Cup Final in Las Vegas next April.

Other highlights include the Washington International Equitation Jumper phase, the USEF Pony Medal, and the NHSAA/ASPCA Maclay.

Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day to Launch the 31st Annual Hampton Classic $20,000 Nicolock Time Challenge to be Featured

The 31st annual Hampton Classic Horse Show will begin on Sunday, August 27 with Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day. This exhilarating mix of equestrian competition and family entertainment is just the start of an eight-day extravaganza that runs from August 27-September 3 and culminates with the $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix on Sunday, September 3.

Manhattan Mortgage Company is celebrating eleven years as the sponsor of Opening Day at the Hampton Classic. As the kick-off to the event, Manhattan Mortgage's Opening Day features the perfect recipe, blending horse show competition with shopping, eating, and activities the whole family can enjoy.

Since the first day of the Hampton Classic is focused on the local community, Melissa Cohn, owner and founder (in 1985) of Manhattan Mortgage, chose this day as a way of giving back to the community that has supported her company for so many years.

"Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day has become one of the Hampton Classic's most loved traditions," said Hampton Classic Executive Director Shanette Barth. "The ceremonies feature a variety of attractions for the whole family, including a parade of animals and the beautiful black Allan Arrieta Friesians, followed by the day's featured show jumping class, the Nicolock Time Challenge. All of this excitement is a perfect start to the action-packed week ahead! Headlining the opening day ceremony this year will be John Casey's Frisbee dogs K-9s in Flight, who will entertain the audience with exciting Frisbee tricks."

Cohn's support of worthy causes goes beyond the horse show arena. She continues to support beneficiaries that are meaningful to her, including many that are based in the Hamptons. These include the CDCH (Child Development Center of the Hamptons), The Retreat Domestic Violence Services, and Habitat for Humanity. Cohn's efforts have not gone unnoticed and over the years she has received numerous awards including the Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of The Year Award (2003), Lifetime Achievement Award by the Lighthouse for the Blind (2004), Builder of the Year Award from Habitat for Humanity (2004), the inaugural The Retreat Hope Award (2005), and most recently was recognized by the Israel Cancer Research Fund (ICRF) as a Woman of Action.

Also an avid horsewoman with a passion for horses and competition, Cohn will be among the many competitors vying for one of the coveted Hampton

Classic ribbons to add to her collection. She'll also be entertaining guests in her chalet and joining Executive Director Shanette Barth to kick off the Opening Day festivities.

On Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day the competition features Long Island riders and begins at 8:00 a.m. in every arena, with the exception of the Grand Prix Ring which starts at 9:00 a.m. Leadline classes, where nearly 100 youngsters under the age of 8 and their ponies will fill the ring with smiles and laughter, hold center stage in the morning before giving way to the World of the Horse Opening Day Ceremony at 1:00 p.m.

Headlining the competition on Opening Day is the $20,000 Nicolock Time Challenge at 2:00 p.m. More than thirty top show jumping riders and horses are expected to compete in the fourth annual running of this popular speed jumping class. Last year, Ramiro Quintana of Argentina won this class aboard Carousel, owned by Mary B. Schwab and OEJI Farm.

Throughout this day (and all week!) families are

Der-Dau to Honor Founder Jose Der Exotic Gala to Highlight Hampton Classic Social Schedule

To honor its founder, Jose Der, Sr., for more than 50 years of excellence in hand-making custom boots and shoes of the highest quality, Der-Dau Custom Boots and Shoes, a Hampton Classic sponsor, is hosting an exotic reception on the Friday evening.

Der was taught by an uncle to make shoes and boots by hand while he was growing up in Cuba. The tribute honoring him will have the ambiance of a Havana night club and will be held at Duck Walk Vineyards in Water Mill on Friday evening, September 1. Tickets are available in advance for $250 per person and may be purchased at the Der-Dau boutique at The Hampton Classic, by calling 1-800-DER-DAU-6 or 917-642-4182, or by emailing invite@derdau.com.

The evening will include a fundraising auction of one-of-a-kind items that will benefit World Vision Children's Charity. World Vision is a Christian relief and development organization dedicated to helping children and their communities worldwide reach their full potential by tackling the causes of poverty. They serve the world's poor, regardless of a person's religion, race, ethnicity, or gender.

To honor Der, the night will feature Cuban cuisine (including a Der-Dau "Secret Ingredient" Mojito!), Cuban dress and decorations, Latin music and dancers, and many surprises that will transport guests to Der's native Cuba, where he first developed his amazing skills with leather.

Der continued to develop his skills after leaving the island nation in 1945. From his roots in pre-World War II Havana, he built a company with a reputation of unparalleled excellence.

Der and his wife Maria have two daughters and a son, Joseph, who practically grew up in his father's store. By age 10, Joseph was earning his keep sweeping floors and helping to keep the place clean. But leather scraps were hardly all that the future company president was picking up.

"I started at the store by sweeping and cleaning up," said Joseph, who assumed the position of company president in 1993, "but I was always watching and learning. I eventually became a clicker, actually getting to cut leather patterns. After I mastered one step, I'd move on to the next, but no matter how ready I thought I was, I was never permitted to advance without first proving to my father that I had absolutely mastered each step."

With his father still deeply involved in the manufacturing end of the business, the younger Der eventually took charge of management and marketing and set out to expand the company. He personally oversaw a strategic plan to establish the company in the elite world of equestrian sports, aligning the company with the sport's leading associations and events as a sponsor and maintaining, along with both his parents, a visible presence at the nation's major events, such as The Hampton Classic.

jodhpur boot

Der-Dau customers soon included Olympic riders and other stars of the sport. The key to their allegiance continues to be what has always been the Der-Dau trademark: custom boots and shoes individually crafted by hand with personal attention, quality materials, unmatched skill, and pride in a trade that has become uncommon in this day of mass production.

Der-Dau was the first in the equestrian industry to introduce a line of boots showcasing exotic leathers in a variety of colors and skins. The use of these rare leathers helped position Der-Dau as "refreshing, fashion-forward, and trendy," according to various reviews.

Der-Dau also revolutionized the equestrian industry with its patented inside leather lining. This patented lining, introduced in January 2005, has become Der-Dau's most requested custom item.

With Der-Dau's half-century of success manufacturing equestrian boots and shoes, Der felt that 2006 was the right time to launch the company's first-ever line of mainstream custom accessories. Included are ladies' handbags, men's and women's belts, and iPod covers, in addition to a custom fashion boot with an equestrian flair that comprises a jodhpur ankle boot and half-chaps.

"For more than 50 years, Der-Dau has been making quality boots and shoes by hand and the key to our success has been the pride and dedication we take in our craft," Joseph said. "Everything we have achieved is because of my father and our success is a tribute to him. It is our intention to honor him with a special night and to use that occasion to launch our first-ever line of mainstream accessories – a bold new move that we believe will set our company on a path that will change us forever!"

To order tickets for the tribute to Jose Der or to order Der-Dau products, please call 1-800-DER-DAU-6 or please visit the Der-Dau website at: www.derdau.com for product information.

Prudential Financial Returns as Hampton Classic Lead Sponsor

As the Hampton Classic begins its fourth decade, a host of new and returning sponsors have lined up to be part of one of the nation's biggest and most respected horse shows.

As the Hampton Classic returns, August 27 through September 3, it celebrates its 31st anniversary with more than seventy corporate sponsors drawn from virtually every sector of the business world – aviation, fashion, finance, luxury brands, publishing, real estate, and television. The Classic's impressive sponsorship roster includes such long-time supporters as Calvin Klein (1980), Jaguar (1997), Land Rover (1989), David Yürman (1996), Manhattan Mortgage Company (1996), Prudential Financial (1998), Sotheby's International Realty (1999), and Wölffer Estate Vineyards (1991).

"We are very proud of our loyal family of corporate sponsors," stated Shanette Barth, Executive Director of the Show. "The Hampton Classic would not have achieved its position of national prominence without them and we are so grateful when they return year after year. It is especially gratifying to have so many new companies join what was already an amazing roster."

The Hampton Classic is one of the country's largest hunter/jumper horse shows. With more than 50,000 spectators and 1,500 horses, the Classic is not only a sporting event of major proportions, but also one of the most extravagant social events of the summer, thus drawing the cream of the crop when it comes to sponsorship.

"The Hampton Classic is indeed honored to welcome this vast family of sponsors," stated Michael Howell, Director of Marketing for the Hampton Classic. "The commitment these sponsors make to the Classic is what makes it so special and what sets it apart from all other horse shows."

Heading the list of returning sponsors is Prudential Financial, reassuming its role as title sponsor of the $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix, the Classic's featured event to be held on Sunday afternoon, September 3.

Sotheby's International Realty returns as title

Three time Olympic medalist Joe Fargis won the 2005 Prudential Grand Prix

sponsor of the $25,000 Sotheby's International Realty Challenge Cup and Wölffer Estate returns as a sponsor but with a new positioning, title sponsor of the $10,000 Wölffer Estate Equitation Championship. Both of these events will be held on Saturday, September 2.

Calvin Klein returns as sponsor of the $25,000 Calvin Klein Show Jumping Derby, a member of the Show Jumping Hall of Fame Jumper Classic Series, and Hermès of Paris comes in as a new sponsor of the $10,000 Hermès Hunter Classic. Both of these events are held on Sunday, September 3. Other returning sponsors include Barbour by Peter Elliot, Champagne Louis Roederer, FENDI, Nicolock, Pepsi Bottling Ventures, Prudential Douglas Elliman Real Estate, R-Squared Real Estate Partners, and The Corcoran Group.

This year, the Hampton Classic also welcomes back Der-Dau Custom Boots and Shoes, but in a new role as sponsor of the Classic's Riders Tent. The Der-Dau Riders Tent is where the Classic's riders, from those who are up-and-coming to those who have won Olympic medals, can relax as they watch other competitors take their turn in the Grand Prix ring.

London Jewelers, a new sponsor this year, is the official jewelry retailer of the Hampton Classic and will be showcasing their wares in the Classic's Boutique Garden. Ciesse, a high-end Italian outerwear company, will also have a boutique in the garden.

Also new to the Classic's family of sponsors are FTI Consulting, title sponsor of the $30,000 FTI Consulting 7- & 8-year-old Young Jumper Championship Finals, and GREY GOOSE® Vodka, title sponsor of the $50,000 GREY GOOSE® Vodka World Cup Qualifier, which sets the order for Sunday's $150,000 Prudential Financial Grand Prix.

Other new sponsors include Bank of America, Blue Star Jets, Budget Rent-A-Car System, Calyon Financial, Hampton Resorts & Hospitality, Mellon, NYMEX, and RV Sales of Broward.

Hamptons Artist Dan Black Selected As Hampton Classic Horse Show's 2006 Poster Artist

Unique Painting Captures Spirit of Classic Grand Prix Sunday

Hamptons artist Dan Black was selected as the artist for the 2006 Hampton Classic Horse Show commemorative art poster.

A frequent visitor to the Hampton Classic over the years, Black has long been eager to capture the spirit of the horse show. A big believer in painting as a vehicle for story-telling, he has undertaken a series of paintings that evoke narratives regarding the show.

For this year's poster, he focused on a climactic horse show moment. The painting tells the story of Grand Prix Sunday from the viewpoint of spectators in one of the private chalets. Through the artist's eyes, we are looking out to the course over viewers' elegant hats and festive table, set with champagne and flowers, all of it aglow in the rosy afternoon light. The picture celebrates the old-world spectacle of watching a champion horse and rider clearing a jump under the admiring gaze of high society and the watchful eyes hidden in the judges' tower.

"I've had a strong attachment to the Hampton Classic for many years now and have long dreamed about doing the poster," Black said. "I have great admiration for many of the posters from past years and consider it an outstanding honor to be included with such artists. In other words, I'm really, really excited!"

For the other paintings in this series, Black chose early-morning scenes that reveal the deep breath before the plunge; moments of exercise and grooming that lay the essential groundwork for the spectacle to come when the crowds arrive. His paintings start as plein air studies – quick, spontaneous watercolor sketches done on the spot in an effort to capture the light and movement of his subjects. He supplements these sketches with photography that adds any details that enhance the story. The finished paintings are usually a combination of watercolor and pen-and-ink, giving them an aura of 19th century prints and engravings.

Black grew up in New York and Paris, developing a love of drawing very young. He received his Bachelor's degree at New York University and got further training at the New School/Parsons School of Design. For over 25 years, he has been accepting commissions to paint detailed watercolor and pen-and-ink portraits of houses and historic buildings. Using the same media, he also creates evocative, nostalgic landscapes, currently favoring subjects from his travels in Tuscany, Vermont, the Black Hills region of South Dakota, and Florida. He grew up spending summers in Southampton and has long loved drawing and painting in the area. He also has a long-standing affinity for wildlife and horses, with some technical training in rendering natural history subjects.

For Black, painting is not vocation but avocation. He works full-time as a volunteer minister of Jehovah's Witnesses and pursues painting as a serious avocation. The two careers often complement each other nicely. With his wife, Lisa, he travels around the country to deliver lectures on the Bible and often finds inspiration in the landscapes and towns that they encounter along the way.

Black's work has been praised for its elegant use of line, its rich and meticulous sense of light and detail, and its gently nostalgic, wistful spirit. His paintings and prints have been exhibited in galleries as far-flung as South Dakota, Florida, and Connecticut. Those who have collected his work include Peter Lawson-Johnson, former chairman of the Guggenheim Museum; W. C. Butcher, former chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank; and Betty Sherrill, president of McMillen, Inc. Black also collaborates with a fine printmaker to create limited-edition prints on high-grade watercolor paper.

Hampton Classic to Host Finals for Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities on Monday, August 28

The finals for the Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities (LIHSSRD) will be held on Monday, August 28 at the Hampton Classic Horse Show. The LIHSSRD finals mark the first time in the horse show's three-decade history that competition will be held on Monday. Admission will be free on this day when all of the shops in the Hampton Classic's popular Boutique Garden and Stable Row will be open for business. The show series, created by HorseAbility, was founded to provide riders with disabilities the same competitive experience that other riders enjoy.

The LIHSSRD competition at the Hampton Classic will be the culmination of the organization's five-show series at select horse shows on Long Island during the spring and summer of 2006. Such shows included:

April 15 – Thomas School of Horsemanship Horse Show (Melville)

May 14 – Long Island PHA Horse Show (Yaphank)

June 11 – Smithtown Hunt Horse Show (Old Westbury)

July 23 – Salt River Farms Horse Show (Center Moriches)

August 8 – Glen Head Horse Show (Muttontown)

Riders will compete in classes such as walk, walk/trot, and walk/trot/figure 8 and will be awarded points according to USEF rules for equitation classes. The top 15 competitors in each division, assisted riders and independent riders, will qualify for the finals at the Hampton Classic.

Executive Director Shanette Barth is pleased to host the finals for HorseAbility's new series. She says that, "the Hampton Classic traditionally has not had competition on the Monday of the horse show. With this new series finals, spectators will now have some exciting competition to watch in addition to the fantastic shopping we offer. And, as always, there will still be no admission charge on Monday!"

HorseAbility was founded in 1993 by Kathleen (Katie) Kilcommons McGowan when she lent her horse to her physical therapist friend who used therapeutic riding as a method of treatment for a child with cerebral palsy. When Ms. McGowan saw the child's physical and emotional connection with the animal and subsequent acceleration in his treatment, she knew she had found her calling. Combining her education, love of children, and long-standing relationship with horses, she founded HorseAbility.

Since then, the organization has converted to a New York Not-for-Profit Corporation and is one of only a few "premier centers" on Long Island as accredited by the North American Riding for the Handicapped Association. Its mission is to offer a wide range of horse-related programs to those with special needs in order to promote their physical and spiritual well-being.

For more information about HorseAbility or the LIHSSRD, please visit www.horseability.org or call (631) 367-1646.

Go Fish

This past week brought a new moon, higher tides and much bait close to shore in the bays and ocean. This should bring a big run of large, striped bass. Inshore fishing continues strong for fluke, porgies, weakfish and bluefish. Offshore, the tuna bite continues and some boats going offshore for the Hamptons Offshore Invitational Tournament caught and released blue and white marlin. The tournament, hosted by the Shinnecock Marlin and Tuna Club, is on through this Sunday, August 27 (www.smtc-online.org). Weigh-ins are daily until 4 p.m., and 2 p.m. this Sunday, at Oakland's Restaurant & Marina on Shinnecock Inlet.

Steve at Wego Fishing Station, Southold, reports plenty of fluke on the south side of Montauk Point and bluefish in the bays. He predicts that if the winds continue from the north, the chance of catching big striped bass should increase. There are also plenty of large porgies on the north side of Gardiner's Island and at the Ruins.

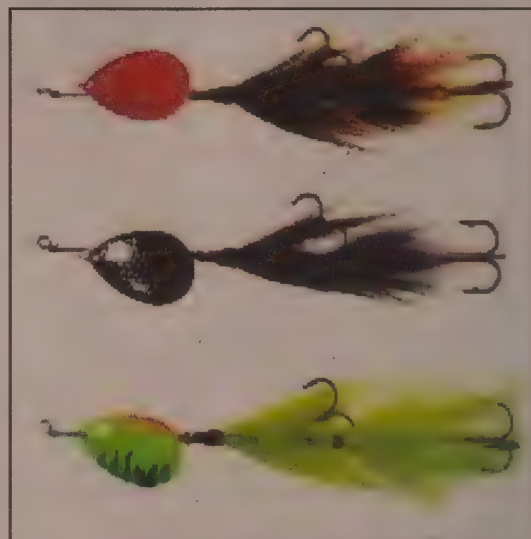

Party boats out of Greenport and Orient have been catching bluefish and fluke on jigs and bucktails. Off Orient Point, day trips bring in porgies and fluke in the bays and striped bass at night.

Bill at Star Island Marine, Montauk, says yellowfin tuna up to 65 pounds and albacore up to 50 pounds are being caught at the Fishtails and Dip. Most successful catches are in the early morning and late afternoon while trolling. Captain Al reports a client caught a 130-pound mako shark offshore in 77-degree water and there were whales in the area at the time.

Paul at Freddy's Bait & Tackle in Montauk says there are big bluefish on the north side of Montauk Point and plenty of fish off Shagwong Point.

Harvey Bennett of The Tackle Shop, Amagansett, reports many three to five-pound bluefish in Gardiner's Bay, and weakfish being caught on jigs off White's Beach. One client, fishing on a flyrod off a boat, caught a 20-pound striped bass at the Ruins, and Coffee Bill caught a four-pound fluke near buoy #31 in Napeague Harbor.

Donny at East End Bait & Tackle, Hampton Bays, says there are plenty of fluke outside the Shinnecock inlet in 40-60 feet of water, and good-sized porgies in Great Peconic Bay at Roger's Rock. Capt. Don Kaye reports striped bass feeding on anchovies (fresh bait) and bluefish feeding on spearing in Shinnecock Bay.

The first family Canal Day is this Saturday, August 26, at Shinnecock Canal Park in Hampton Bays (just off Rte. 27A, Old Montauk Highway at Newtown Rd.). There are fishing-themed activities for children and a barbecue ($15 adults, $5 children) from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. All proceeds go to create a Shinnecock Canal Maritime Heritage Center.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Ken Morse of Tight Lines Tackle in Sag Harbor on the birth of their second daughter. Ken says she is a real keeper!

The Phenomenal Feeling of Massage

Cygalle Healing Spa, the latest venture of Cygalle Dias, is a mobile healing sanctuary that resided in the Hamptons for most of the summer. Called "an elixir for the psyche" this traveling spa combines the best ancient methods with the most modern in the field. Eastern and Western approaches are melded and master healers offer clarity of mind, revival of spirit, and relief from a hectic schedule. Cygalle Healing Spa recently made an appearance at the Jaguar Cain Estate in Southampton, offering a taste of what they will soon bring to a permanent location in Manhattan, at a sanctuary that is under development. In the meantime, Cygalle and her group will move to New York City for Fashion Week, in addition to plans for traveling to other prestigious events around the globe. Ms. Dias calls it a "sanctuary for influential individuals."

Under the direction of Ms. Dias, who is known for transforming spaces to promote health, wellness and beauty, the healing spa promises not only better health but a sense of well being with a plethora of soothing treatments and cutting edge techniques. The palette of luxurious services includes: massage (Phenomenal Touch Spa, Stimulating Shiatsu and 3D Hot Stone Massage); Healing treatments (Mermaid Sea Wraps and Hot Herbal), and body scrubs and exfoliations (Aztec Scrub and the Dead Sea Exfoliation). The Spa also offers natural remedies of the purest and finest ingredients, as well as lifestyle coaching and holistic education classes through its international network of renowned teachers, specialists and practitioners.

Robin Feman and I had the chance to sample some of these services recently. If you have the opportunity to experience a treatment with any of Cygalle's healing hands, here's why you don't want to miss it.

My work was done with Leslie Bruder. Through a ten-year evolution into what she now calls Phenomenal Touch Massage, Leslie has invented a new way of touching that surpasses the ordinary.

So often a massage is a great disappointment – shallow, uninspired, easily forgotten. But my experience of this innovative technique with the Master Toucher herself was more than memorable. Leslie's method, in which she is training a staff of practitioners at Cygalle Healing Spa, is a revolutionary approach that transcends the arbitrary boundaries of the physical body. Unlike most massage, Phenomenal Touch Massage approaches the body as a three-dimensional entity. Rather than working on compartmentalized sections of the body, Leslie's method enables the therapist to move the client's body in space, utilizing fulcrums, shortened muscle techniques and by confusing muscle tension into release. Using hands on all sides of the body, as well as draping techniques, she enters a dance of reciprocity with her client.

Phenomenal Massage relies on gravity rather than strength to gain depth when penetrating a muscle. Instead of pushing the thumb into a client's neck, for example, the head is lifted and slowly lowered over the anchored thumb, offering a less labor intensive or painful healing process. Immediately, as Leslie began her work, my mind began to wander from the immediate and visceral realm and into a humming serenity. Using her hands, her arms, elbows; even her legs, Leslie was able to find an organic rhythm and fluidity of movement. She compares the method to "being the wave." The effect is mind-boggling.

As a result of the all inclusive touch approach, I lost track of all physical boundaries. Rather than feeling her two hands, you feel she is everywhere all at once. As she described it, the body becomes an undulating piece of seaweed in a great ocean. This is true – I actually felt immersed in water.

"I hope you have no plans," Leslie said before we began.

"Why, will this hurt?" I asked, a bit apprehensive due to a somewhat catastrophic massage experience I had not so long ago.

"No," she laughed. "You will be so relaxed that you might not be able to move later."

She was right. For two days after the massage, my body reached a new level of agility. With a heightened flexibility, and sense of movement, a person should experiment, finding new positions and an increased range of motion. I even did some impressive late night dancing.

Robin, at the same time, worked with Nancy, who offered a more traditional approach to healing. Robin had been suffering pain in her shoulder and elbow, most likely due to repetitive motion with the mouse and computer, and also some pain in her foot caused by her new jogging habit. Nancy picked up on these sore spots immediately, without being told, but instead listening to the signals that Robin's body

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

THE Y FACTOR with Christian McLean

On The Wagon And Off With The Weight

Two things inspired this week's column. The first is a good night's sleep, the second is a conversation I overheard about alcohol's connection to not staying as slim as we should be. The good night's sleep came after the decision to forgo a Saturday night on the town. I was torn, I assure you, but I was also tired from a long day in the sun, so sleep seemed to outweigh my drive to hit the bars and toss back a few cold ones.

The result of not going out was that I slept 11 hours and still got up at ten in the morning, giving me plenty of time (and energy) to go for a run and hit the gym, finishing before noon. Late nights generally prevent me from making it to the gym on Sundays and I needed to take advantage of the fact that I felt refreshed and hydrated, instead of the general malaise I usually deal with on Sundays. I know this all sounds like rambling, but I'm getting to the point of this piece and it goes back to the conversation I overheard earlier in the week.

I know the trend of recent years has been to count carbs, but it is my thesis that a clear way to control your weight is to count the calories. Alcohol has calories. It's no secret. I'm sure you've seen enough beer guts at the beach to agree with me on this one. So what happens if you kick the booze? With Labor Day fast approaching, you must shudder at the thought of not having that Caipirinha or Hogarden while relaxing in a hammock, but just imagine. I did a quick survey and found that the average summer drinker between 22 and 34 consumes 6 drinks per day/night they drink – this includes Bloody Marys and mimosas at brunch, Mojitos for cocktails at Sunset Beach, wine with dinner, and heaven knows what else the rest of the night. Also this poll revealed that a good majority of Hamptons residents in this age group drink 2 to 3 times a week. For purposes of this article, let's say our imaginary person does the extreme. They drink 6 glasses of alcohol three nights a week. That equals 18 glasses of whatever booze it is they drink a week. Take this and multiply it by the 13 weeks of the summer season. That equals 234 drinks (random note: that's about a $2000 bar tab).

So let's do some more math. Wine averages out to be about 90 calories a glass, a bottle of Amstel Light is 93 calories, and a mojito is around 220. Roughly 3500 calories equal a pound. That means if you burn 3500 calories in a day, you have burned off a pound, but if you intake 3500 calories it means you have added a pound. So let's see how this adds up: 234 bottles of Amstel Lights at 93 calories each is equal to 21,762 calories. That's 6.2 pounds. Wine is about 6 pounds. Not that much over the entire summer, but what about mojitos? 14.7 pounds! There is more to this equation than just the calories going in. If you're drinking, the chances of your exercising are less. You can't run when you're three sheets to the wind, at least I wouldn't recommend it. If you've had six mojitos the night before, your head probably won't be in the proper shape to hit the rowing machine or weights, and you'd more than likely prefer to drown than swim laps, so it equates more calories stored in your body. If you figure that not exercising the day after the night before will leave you with 500 extra calories each day, that's 1500 calories each week, and 19,500 calories for the summer or 5.5 pounds. So, in theory you could gain up to 20.2 pounds come Labor Day.

Surely this is the extreme and doesn't factor in how many calories your body burns on a daily basis. It is a simple mathematic equation to prove that one more drink really can hurt. So before you call your friends for a margarita party, remember they run up to about 400 calories apiece. Now do you know why that bathing suit doesn't fit as well as it did in June.

was sending. She gently "snapped" the elbow back into place and it has been free of pain ever since. Nancy also asked if Robin had recently injured or even broken her right foot since it was so aggravated and strained. The tensions there too melted away and have yet to return. Robin commented that the brain has a wonderful way of making humans forget pain – after her massage, she could only remember feeling as fluid and relaxed as she was at that moment, and could barely recall the exhaustion and tightness of her pre-Cygalle Spa day.

Skin deep with Samantha Altea

A Kiss on the hand.....

When Brad Pitt designed his own wedding bands, every woman on the planet swooned.....

When J-Lo received a pink diamond ring it was the talk of tinsel town. The right hand ring has become so popular that women are doing the same for themselves and feel completely empowered to buy a diamond just because. After all, they ARE a girl's best friend. But these days, even guys are jumping on the diamond encrusted wagon, because bling is in. However, buying a diamond can be a daunting prospect and investment that demands some serious cash.

If purchasing a car, a computer, or any kind of gadget, gents, in particular, read anything they can get their hands on. They do their research on any new high-tech toy. But diamonds.....they're something completely foreign to most men. Though they pick up the odd tidbit from girlfriends who are already sporting rocks, they're not, for the most part, diamond experts.

In the market for some bling myself, I found an expert to help. She's not only a gemologist, an MBA, a designer and fashionista, she's also my new best friend. Or at least when she sits you down and imparts "gems" of information you had no idea about, it feels like you've known her forever. Her specialty is taking clients through the whole process of buying a diamond, holding their hand as it were, from getting the best bang for their buck to custom designing something unique and perfect for the girl, or even guy, in question. Vivianne Ivanier gets to know her clients over cocktails or lunch, so that she can help create the diamond YOU deserve. If she's working with a gent on an engagement ring, she'll take him out for a beer and romance him into telling her all about the lucky lady. Then she'll find the perfect diamond (or gem) at the best price, will work with him on designing a custom made, unique item. With her last client, Gemma Kidd's fiancée, she did such a great job and Kidd loved her ring so much she invited Viv. to the engagement party.

But if you want to go it alone, realize that most retail stores mark up their diamonds beyond belief. Or, if you think you have "A Guy," as many do, who will get you a good deal, there are still some things he might not educate you about. So, my new best friend has kindly imparted some insider's info to get you started.

Begin with the 4 Cs

1. COLOR runs on a scale from D thru Z.....D being the best (least color).....fancy colors (like J-Lo's famous pink) are graded differently, from faint to fancy vivid

2. CLARITY runs on a scale as follows: IF(internally flawless); VVS1&2(very, very slightly included); VS1&2(very slightly included); SI1&2(slightly included); I1&2&3 (included).

3. CUT establishes a stone's symmetry and polish and runs on a scale as follows: excellent, very good, good, poor, very poor.

4. CARAT is the weight measurement used for diamonds.

Where some men go wrong:

Men get insecure about going out on a limb, so they choose a ring that looks like all the others they see out on the street for fear of going "wrong." Because clients often know so little about diamond jewelry before buying an engagement ring, they decide to go with what they know.....which is little to nothing. They ignore the billions of combinations and permutations available to them in terms of creative options! That's why it's good to do your research, or get someone like Viv to help you.

Design by Vivianne Ivanier

Diamond Tips:

It's important to balance your budget to get the most for your needs.....divvy up stone vs. setting costs properly. (Would you put a Picasso in a cheap frame?)

Different shapes of diamonds demand more or less attention depending on the different diamond quality measures unless price is no object (sigh.....IF ONLY!!). So, for example, concentrate on color when dealing with round stones (and other brilliant cut stones), and concentrate on clarity when dealing with emerald cut stones (and other step-cut stones).

Colorless vs. Fancy-Colored Diamonds:

Little known fact – Diamonds come in every color of the rainbow.

Strong color is caused by a prevailing amount of one impurity that has invaded the stone, i.e., nitrogen

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Oh, Fall Again?

Sadly, summer is drawing to a close. After Labor Day, the days will shorten dramatically, the weather will grow cooler in the evenings, and leaves and plants will begin to show brown edges that illustrate the effects of August sun and foretell fall.

Late August and early September are important gardening months, and now is the time to spruce up the garden for the remaining weeks of outdoor living, and prepare the garden to carry plants through winter to spring.

This time of year is a great time to seed new lawns and/or repair the results of summer drought. Take action only if you can ensure adequate water for newly seeded areas (grass seed requires daily watering until the grass germinates and continuous moisture to establish strong roots). It is also a good time to fertilize lawns. The number of applications of fertilizer, of course, depends on the product you use, but try to use an organic fertilizer if possible to protect the sensitivities of the environment.

Begin labeling perennials and identifying the location of tender tubers and bulbs like dahlias, caladiums, and elephant ears. Marking these now will help identify their locations once leaves die back. As leaves and stalks wither, cut off the foliage to keep the garden looking fresh (however, leaving seed pods on Rudbeckia and Echinacea will keep birds around the garden foraging for seeds).

Dig tender bulbs as soon as there are indications that the temperature will be below 45 degrees at night. Place these bulbs in a dry location for about a week. Once dried, store these in a basket or bucket covered with a combination of sand and peat. If you see evidence of any fungus and mildew, dust the bulbs and tubers with a little fungicide before storing. Keep any stored bulbs in a cool place (about 45-degrees) throughout winter.

Continue to fertilize annuals at this time of year with an all purpose fertilizer. This will keep them blooming strongly until frost. However, be careful not to fertilize perennials further this season. Fertilizing may spark additional growth that probably will not have the time to harden off before frost sets in.

Why not examine the garden critically and plan for next season at this point? Make notes about what things have worked well. What combinations seemed to evoke the right result? What did not work? Were there times of the summer when colors, textures, and interest were sparse? Did some plants grow out of control while others seemed to recede? Based on your answers, create a plan for improving the garden appearance next season. Not only is this fun to do while the current season's results are still fresh in thought, it provides an impetus that can motivate a gardener all winter.

If you have not ordered spring bulbs, it is already a little late to get stock from mail order houses. However, the local garden shops and nurseries carry an abundant supply of the latest stock of tulips, daffodils, and other spring bulbs. Remember the ideal time to start planting bulbs is about six weeks before freezing temperatures, so we are quickly running out of time. When planting bulbs, make sure they reside somewhat deeper than recommended. This helps set roots and protects them from squirrels and chipmunks that seem to love to dig them up as soon as they are planted. If you have a problem with these pests, plant a few fritillaria in and among the bulbs (rodents hate the smell). Or, crush some garlic and macerate it in water for a couple of days before using with bulbs. Sprinkle some of the water over the bulbs as you plant (this seems to fend off critters). Never use bone meal when planting bulbs as it attracts dogs and raccoons who like to dig up the bulbs to get at the bone meal.

While many people hate mums, we find a strategically placed plant or two adds wonderful fall color to the garden. Most people use mums as annuals because it takes real work to get them to form a bushy plant the second year. However, when treated as tall perennials at the back of the border they seem to overcome the usual "corporate" look some find offensive.

While it is sad that summer is waning, focusing on late summer tasks provides lots of activity for gardeners. Who knows, it may even create some excitement!

Swing Low

A beautiful backyard will bring out the child in everyone, but a truly great yard will absolutely thrill the kids. Summertime play should be enjoyed by people of all ages, but for the actual kids, there are some great ways to encourage fun outdoor playtime. If you add a simple play structure to your property, you will no longer have to drag the kids away from that Barney DVD to get them to play outside. Depending on your skill level and the piece of equipment you have in mind, you may even be able to build your own. I would recommend sticking to the sandbox, because it would take years of therapy to undo the emotional damage of a child's homemade swing set collapsing as he or she tries it out for the first time. But regardless of whether you build your own or buy something pre-made, making your backyard a playground will make you a hero in your child's eyes.

Some thing to consider when creating your own playground is what material you should use. Wood is the most highly recommended backyard material. Wood is very versatile, coming in many colors and stains, and a wood playground is more aesthetically pleasing. It looks natural and will keep your backyard from looking like a public park in the city. Wood swing sets can be added to easily. And don't worry about the wood rotting and weakening because most swing sets are made of very high quality treated pine. A store-bought swing set will usually come with very detailed installation instructions for the do-it-yourselfer, but most stores also have an installation service. You can save money by installing the equipment yourself, but make sure to consider whether you have the necessary tools and the free time to do this before you say no to the professional service. I am sure that you will not win points from the kids when they see a new playground set that they can't play on because mom and dad haven't gotten around to setting it up.

Like any other addition to your home and garden, you must consider budget and space when planning a backyard playground. Consider your children's safety: are there any objects that will get in the way of a swing swinging? Will the slide land your little one's bottom right on a rock? Make sure there is room to run around from one part of the swing set to another. And for your own sake, make sure that you can watch the kids from a comfortable location like a back patio or porch.

So go ahead and make your back yard into a place that is fun for all ages. Browse the selection of playground sets that have exciting names like the "Grand Royal Palace" and the "Royal Clubhouse Deluxe." Then finish the backyard with a few easy projects that will provide the kids with hours of classic fun. Build a simple sandbox. Anyone can do this - just buy four pieces of lumber for the sides of the box (consider how many children will be playing to determine the size of the box) and eight six-inch pieces for support blocks. If you feel motivated and have the tools, miter cut the edges at a 45 degree angle and fit the box together. You can just line the sides up as-is if you want to. Use two or three screws in each corner to hold them together. Attach the support blocks on the outside of each side of the square approximately 6 inches from each corner. The sandbox is now ready to be filled. Sand is available from any local gravel supplier. You may be surprised at how much sand you will need. A sand box about 5 ft. by 5 ft. will need almost 1 ton of sand to fill it. The kids will literally have a ton of fun. You may want to cover the bottom of the box with a weed block or landscape fabric to discourage weeds and allow for drainage. Do not use plastic, as it doesn't allow water to drain and the kids will be making mud pies instead of sand castles.

Every fun backyard needs a rope swing or a tire swing too, but I won't insult the intelligence of Dan's Papers readers by explaining how to make these. Just take a look at your backyard, imagine what you would have wanted when you were a kid, and start creating your own personal play-space.

Serving Up Style

I ordered lobster for dinner last weekend. I waited, claw-cracker in hand, with a flimsy plastic bib tied in a bow at the back of my neck, and watched as a steaming red lobster was placed in front of me. I lifted a claw to begin the arduous process of getting the meat out of the shell. But wait, what was this? Something caught my eye under the lobster. It was some sort of diagram. I hurriedly picked up the whole lobster and shoved the baked potato over to the side of the plate. Amazing! The platter my lobster was served on had a funky, kitschy, step-by-step diagram of how to eat a lobster. I was thrilled - what a brilliant idea. If only every serving platter was as perfectly suited as this one was. But there are some great kinds that will have you bringing your serving platters down from the shelves and getting them out on the table a little more often.

The most necessary platter for every home is the chips and salsa combo platter. This is most likely the most used of the serving platters. Every gathering is suitable for chips and salsa and this simple snack becomes something special in a unique dish. I recommend the classic sombrero-style platter, where the chips fill the brim and surround the salsa, which is nestled in the top of the hat. Some might say tacky, I say clever! You can pick up this type of platter for about $20 online. If you are looking for something a little more sophisticated, for the occasion when you are serving chips and salsa at a black-tie wedding, there are some snazzy cut-crystal chips and salsa serving platters available online for about $100.

Serving platters get the most use at big dinner parties, so having an assortment of seasonal and holiday platters is a must in any household. Forget about dull silver or boring white ceramic; go for something with interest and color. Even that terrible casserole will get eaten up if everyone is curious about the picture underneath it. Holiday platters don't get used very often, so they provide an excellent opportunity to really go wild with the design and colors. For these holiday occasions buy something that catches the eye and lights up the table, rather than a platter that will coordinate with your usual color scheme.

As a hostess or a thank-you gift, a great platter turns a simple plate of homemade cookies into something you can be proud to present. There are many places where you can even specially customize your platter with a painting or a photo. The host of the next dinner party you go to will think of you often if a photo of your lovely smiling face is on their platter. You can customize a platter to have a funny or important message on it. Imagine a burger plate with the message, "The Tums are in the medicine cabinet," or a dessert plate with, "You ate it all?" on it.

If your serving platters are run-of-the-mill, you can always add interest with great garnishes. A layer of deeply colored lettuce or purple cabbage makes any boring platter look natural and well-presented. A radish rose here and there on the dish looks great and they are so easy to make. Cut the root tip off the radish, then cut four or five thin petals around radish, leaving a little red between the petals. Chill it in ice water and the petals will spread open like a rose. But don't limit yourself to these simple garnishes. Every flower and leaf in your garden is an opportunity to spice up your serving platter. A beautiful platter and artful garnishes will show your guests that you put some thought into the meal. When done right they add a special feeling to any meal.

Platters can be beautiful, fun, or informational. A great platter may be more exciting than the food served on it. Take another look at this utilitarian kitchen item: platters have personality and style. When they are not being used, an interesting or unique serving platter can be displayed on the shelf as art. Select them carefully and don't be offended if you get more compliments on your platter than on your cooking.

I'll Show You Mine

Everyone collects something. Do you come home from the beach, your pockets stuffed with beach glass, shells, stones and seagull feathers? Is your closet stuffed full of baseball hats? I know that my mom has saved every Christmas card we have ever gotten. No matter what you collect, it just looks like scattered junk when it is not properly displayed. Give your collectibles the attention they deserve by showing them off in an artful and organized way.

Collections add interest to otherwise boring spaces. If you collect something very valuable or fragile, it should be enclosed in a glass case. Invest in a curio cabinet, which can be elegant and sleek, and looks nothing like the one your grandma used to have. Protecting your collection in a display case will prevent damage and reduce the need to dust.

When setting up a display, think about what the collection means and add items of interest to it. For example, if you have a teacup collection passed down from your great aunt, place a picture of her alongside the pieces. If you collect antique books, organize them by subject and place them on separate shelves. Collect an antique that identifies each subject and place that on one side of the shelf. For example, for books about sports, an old ball and glove will identify the shelf, and for books about world travel, an antique globe will convey the theme.

Seashells are one of the most commonly collected items around here, but can also be one of the most difficult to display. I recommend using an old typeset box, which is usually made of pleasantly weathered wood, and has shallow, little boxes of all sizes to fit each shell perfectly. Mount your favorite shells with a dab of glue and then display the entire box on a wall. Another great shell display is a glass-top table with a sunken shadow box-type top. Fill the space with a thin layer of sand, then display your shells and pebbles just as you found them at the beach.

If you, like my mom, can't seem to throw away those greeting cards (which usually have beautiful artwork on them), make a simple bulletin board into a display. Cross-weave colorful ribbon and staple it behind the board. Simple pushpins will hold up the cards and you can easily rotate the ones you want to display.

If you have a serious collection, consider designing your room around it. Custom-built shelves are relatively inexpensive and really send the message that your collection is something special. Choose a wall color that will make your items stand out.

Get creative with your collection. Display your antique toy collection in an old red wagon. Fill a large, clear jar with anything you like; your childhood marbles, vintage Christmas ornaments, or colorful knick-knacks will do just fine. Also try playing with lighting to highlight a special piece. Lighting adds focus. You can light from any direction. Shadows cast from the object can add to or subtract from its beauty, so consider it carefully.

Collecting is an ongoing process, and true collectors are always on the lookout. But what to we do when our collection gets out of control and we run out of room in the house? There are a few simple solutions to start with. You can consolidate your collection by displaying one large object where a few used to be. But it may just be time to reassess the value of each piece, and decide if there is anything that can be eliminated from the collection. If, after this process, you still have too much stuff, you will have to pack up some of your items and put them away. Choose your favorite collectables, or a special holiday assortment to display. For a collector who loves every piece, it might be tough to put some away, but those that are displayed will get the attention they deserve. And when you decide to redecorate on a whim, you will love rediscovering each item you packed away.

What everyone loves about collecting and collections is that each piece has a meaning and a special story. Each piece deserves to be highlighted, not tucked away on a dark, dusty shelf or cluttering up every available surface of a room. Don't let your passion for collecting stop when you get home from the flea market. Choosing how to display your collection is just as important as choosing what to collect.

Go East

We all need ways to relax after a week of work or a few hours in traffic. Some habits we have picked up in order to relax are not the healthiest stress-relievers. People turn to a cigarette, a stiff cocktail, or some serious shopping to relax, but these things can actually add to the stress of life and the stress on your body. On the East End, there are so many healthy ways to relax. On the smallest whim, you can take a sunset walk on the beach, a cruise in a sailboat, get a massage, or enjoy a picnic in the park. But there is no need to make an excursion into town to relax. A few simple touches in your garden can make the space just outside your back door as relaxing as any spa in the Hamptons. The key to having a relaxing garden in your backyard is to focus on a few key elements that facilitate stress relief, and an Asian style garden is the best way to do this.

The goal for Asian gardening is to create a positive flow of energy. This harnessing of chi (positive energy) creates a therapeutic healing space that restores and reinvigorates. But there are so many more benefits to an Asian garden than the zen-like internal peace you will experience. An Asian garden is ideal for a small space. If you have a big expansive yard, nestle some Asian elements in a secluded corner. The key ingredients of a relaxing Asian garden can even be shrunk down to fit an office or apartment lifestyle. A tiny bonsai tree will center your mind as you meticulously trim it. A little inexpensive water feature does wonders for the ambiance of an otherwise stuffy office, and a miniature sand garden nestled in a desk drawer anywhere will provide hours of peaceful raking and meditation. A simple, delicate orchid will give you something to nurture and watch flourish.

But in the backyard, the calming effect of a garden in the Japanese or Chinese tradition can be fully effective – and they don't have to be expensive or exotic. You can use native ferns, mosses and miniature conifers combined with local stone and wood elements to create your own interpretation of Eastern traditions. Japanese maples have the most beautifully entrancing deep purple-red foliage, and bamboo thrives naturally in our local soil. The garden needn't look like it has been transplanted from one place to another; you aren't going to fool anyone. Pass on the full-blown pagoda and Buddha statue. A simple, elegant, balanced garden is all that you need to transport yourself to a more positive place.

Asian gardeners prefer meandering, wandering paths and curved edges, believing that they encourage a positive flow of chi. The elements of nature must be represented in the garden. To represent the mountains, use terraces and trellises for layering and depth. Water can be represented in many ways. You may choose to have a substantial and elaborate water element, or a simple, sleek fountain. An easy, homemade pond will also do the job and will create some special interest if you add a few goldfish. Water can even be represented in the garden by a path of river-smoothed stones to indicate that water once flowed there. It is recommended that you hang a few mirrors in the back of the garden to reflect good energy into the space. These gardens tend to look beautiful from spring through fall, because you are not anxiously waiting for and coaxing out a brief bloom. And because there are many conifers and non-plant elements, Asian gardens remain pleasant in the winter.

Besides the aesthetic benefits of an Asian garden, the care required for the garden can be quite therapeutic. Asian gardens must be kept meticulously clean. A morning stroll through the grounds to pick up debris and pull a few weeds can become a calming, pleasurable ritual. Beyond the daily maintenance, the building and additions to the garden are projects that occupy time in a satisfying way. Adding a stone bench as a meditation spot, or building a bamboo fence is a productive and rewarding way to spend an afternoon.

Pass an afternoon in your garden and you will feel renewed. Simply glimpse it as you get in your car in the morning, and your day will be smoother. Asian-inspired gardens are right at home here on the East End and are a perfect fit for our stressed-out lives.

On The Fence?

Fences perform several important functions on your property, for privacy, security and landscape enhancement. When choosing to buy a particular kind of fence, you must be aware of not only its aesthetic value, but its strengths and weaknesses as well. When all points are considered, you will be able to make a more intelligent choice. For many people, the most American of all fence designs is the picket fence. Picket fencing provides security, defines boundaries, protects property, establishes entryways, and is the easiest to construct. Being made of wood, it can be finished with paint or stain to add a more formal appearance. The fence can serve as a visual point of interest in a landscape or as an attractive background for plants. A traditional picket fence can even help control the climate in your yard by tempering blowing winds. Your local area will determine which species of wood are readily available. The primary species or groups of wood used in picket fencing are western red cedar, northern white cedar, whitewoods, and treated woods.

The versatility of wood picket fencing allows you to choose many architectural styles. It can be rustic or traditional, with decorative tops, patterns, curves, and arches, which all add to the fence design.

Attractive, versatile and creative, a chain-link fence system can be an excellent choice. With the right fence you can expect years of protection, privacy, and value. Chain-link fencing comes in a wide range of qualities, colors, sizes, and types. Before you buy, spend a little time getting to know what's available. That way, you'll get the most value for your money and the right fence for your needs.

Chain-link has four elements: fabric, framework, fittings and gates. How you combine them makes all the difference. Each of these components is available in a range of weights (gauges) and types of protective coatings. Providers can mix and match components in an effort to shave costs or differentiate their product. The most common coating is zinc (galvanized), but you'll also find chain-link components with vinyl or polyester color-coatings, in addition to zinc. These color treatments enhance landscaping and blend naturally with trees, shrubs, and bushes. They'll also give you even more protection against corrosion or rust. You should select your chain-link fence fabric based on these three criteria: gauge of wire, size of mesh, and type of protective coating.

For hundreds of years, ornamental fencing has enhanced the architectural beauty of homes, buildings, and churches. Originally fashioned from wrought iron designed and forged by blacksmiths, today's ornamental fencing is crafted using modern materials and current production techniques. Steel or aluminum components are fabricated into sections using fasteners, locking rods, or welding. Once you determine your requirements, you'll find it's easy to select the appropriate ornamental fence for your application.

For the strength and rigidity to withstand weather, climbing children, and abuse from vehicles and power equipment, most ornamental fencing is made from welded or assembled steel. While steel is the most widely used material for ornamental fencing, homeowners and commercial property owners are finding that aluminum fencing is an increasingly attractive option. While not as rigid as steel, aluminum ornamental fencing offers superior corrosion resistance and is low maintenance. The three primary types of ornamental fencing are welded steel, assembled component systems, and aluminum ornamental systems.

Vinyl fencing is a relatively new product, but is catching on fast. Designs that look like post and rail fencing, traditional wood fencing, or decorative iron fencing are made of rigid polyvinyl chloride (PVC) and have great appeal for the property owner looking for a virtually maintenance-free fence.

Vinyl fence is made of essentially the same material as vinyl siding and vinyl windows - not PVC pipe. While PVC pipe does use some of the same ingredients, it doesn't have the weatherability and strength found in siding, windows, and fence. Making vinyl fence requires careful process controls during manufacturing to ensure a high quality product. While most manufacturers offer lengthy warranties on their products, the warranty alone does not define the quality.

As with any other major purchase, careful research into the making and design of any fence you wish to buy will provide you with enough information to help you make an informed decision. Ultimately, your choice of fence should reflect not only its utilitarian function, but the beauty it will add to your yard as well. More information can be found at www.homedepot.com or www.americanfenceassociation.com.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Each season for the past six years, an array of top interior designers, well known architects, builders, crafts-people and landscapers have come together with House & Garden Magazine to present the annual Designer Showhouse here on the East End. The event runs from mid-summer through the end of August and is kick started each season with an opening Gala Preview Party. Each year, a home is either redesigned, renovated or built from top to bottom, showcasing the talents of some of the finest craftsman and artists in the country to benefit a good cause. Proceeds from the Gala Event and Showhouse tours go to benefit Southampton Hospital.

These homes are really something to see and draw huge crowds and lots of money each year since they have begun, making them a huge success for the contributors and the benefactors. Last year's Showhouse was the first on the North Fork, and recreated the grandeur of an old captain's Victorian home, the Jedediah Hawkins House in Jamesport. The home was entirely rebuilt and renovated, saving the historic mansion from ruin.

This summer's Designer Showhouse is an 18,000 square foot Arts & Crafts style home located on 4 acres of open fields in the Bridgehampton countryside. Architect Peter Cook designed the spacious country home to blend into rolling farmland. It was donated by Michael Burns of Burns Development. This is Burns Development's second donation to the cause. They also built the 2004 Showhouse in Wainscott. Thirty-two renowned artists and designers have put this year's work of art together, using a vast collection of the most exquisite and finest quality fabrics, wood and stone. Each room is individually crafted and designed to its motif.

There are 24 rooms, all adorned in lavish designs, with thoughtful details. Some offer distant vistas of the Atlantic and all open up to farmland views. The two story shingle structure has some very distinctive features. An impressive arts & crafts style cedar staircase (one of two) is located off a spacious entry foyer in what is labeled the staircase hall, a room in itself, where towering ceilings and grand floor-to-ceiling windows create a dramatic effect.

One of the most impressive features to the home is its 4000 bottle wine cellar and adjoining recreation space that includes a classic billiard room. The home's eleven full bathrooms are all intricately designed and tiled. The mosaics are simply works of art. The blue tile work in the downstairs guest bath is truly exceptional. The artist has used all hues of both deep and bright ocean blues, which were swirled beautifully into the floor design. The media room is located at the east end of the house and has a circular sun room with long flowing drapery that overlooks a pool and spa area, which appear to be built into the hill. The four-room master suite is also quite impressive with a master bedroom, two sitting rooms and a master bath. The upstairs halls are spacious and the guest bedroom has its own sitting area and sunroom. This area is also quite unique and is designed in a beach and surfing theme, using art and rich natural materials to give it relaxed and beachy feel. One feels like they have gone on vacation by simply stepping into the sitting room. A rear bedroom is airy, floral and feminine. The living room has a grand fireplace and is set between the library and formal dining room, giving off the warmth of rich woods and lush furnishings.

What is special about this Showhouse is that if visitors observe long enough, they will notice more and more detail; the richness of fabric, the high polish of marble or the grain and texture to the various woods.

The showhouse also overlooks a private tennis court and pavilion, a pond, and has a three-car garage with double barn style doors. There is a flower room, mudroom and wet bar that must be experienced to be fully appreciated. There is also an art gallery, The McNeil Art Group, that may be viewed as part of the tour, located at the House & Garden Information Center. The Showhouse is located at 141 Highland Terrace in Bridgehampton and is easily reached via Ocean Road where signs then point the way. Tickets to the tour are $30, and can be bought only at the door between the hours of 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. through August 27th. It is a must see for Hampton house lovers.

You can reach Diane at eastendrealist@yahoo.com.

causes yellow, boron causes blue. Colored diamonds are more rare so more expensive but also a lovely way to be creative in designing an original ring.

Round vs. Fancy-Shaped Diamonds:

Round is most popular but even with this traditional shape, there are so many different setting choices. Fancy cuts were developed at first to maximize the amount of a rough diamond that could be salvaged when polishing a stone (most lose over 50% during cutting), but now fancy cuts are also very popular and appealing.

Rounds are what is known as "brilliant" cuts as they scintillate (sparkle) when you look down into them. Princess cuts, cushion and pear shapes are other examples of brilliant cuts

Emerald cuts are what is known as "step cut" as they look like clear stairs when you look down into them. Radiants and asschers are examples of them.

Lastly, cherish any diamond you give, receive, or wear and know that you're worth it.

UNDERGROUND KNOWLEDGE

Dear Dan,

I saw your article "Subway! Subway" in the July 28th edition. I had picked up a Dan's Papers in a Greenport restaurant, returning from vacation. If I may I would like to offer a small correction to the article.

Deus ex machina predates the Renaissance period by a number of centuries. It was invented by the Greek playwrights to provide a simple solution to a complex situation.

This I learned from Mrs. Hanna Goldman, a delightful, intelligent, and grandmotherly professor of English at Hofstra University way back in 1969. Her course, Source Studies, was required of all second year and (like myself) transfer students. The other colleges in the area did not offer an equivalent course.

Professor Goldman's course covered selected books of the Old Testament, the Iliad, selected Greek plays, and King Lear. I enjoyed the course and her presentation of it. It was a welcome relief from the tedium of my engineering classes.

Thank you for letting me share this with you (and hopefully your readers). My wife and I enjoy reading

Dan's Papers and your puckish sense of humor.
Keep up the good work.

HOMELESS NO MORE

Dear Dan,

During June and July, the Southampton Town Animal Shelter at Red Creek Park in Hampton Bays put out a distress call for adopters and volunteers. We are happy to report that the call was answered and seventy kittens and cats and twenty-four dogs were adopted. Many new volunteers came in to help us also.

Thanks to all our friends and neighbors who stepped forward to help us out. We still have over 130 kittens and cats and forty dogs who need loving homes.

Stop by and see our beautiful facility and meet our great staff and volunteers. You can help by donating food, treats, toys, linens, etc. Please help our animal friends.

ROMANCE UNDER THE STARS

Dear Dan,

I've always enjoyed the cover art on Dan's Papers through all these years. It's like a weekly "gift" to us. Thank you. And, I found it very appropriate that a beautiful star-filled night sky was rendered over Guild Hall by the artist, Tony Walton last week since I know that the Director, Ruth Applehof has made an effort to install "dark sky friendly" outdoor fixtures on the Museum, even educating the NYC architects working on the exterior design to the advantages.

Thank you Dan!

ROUND HOLE, SQUARE PEG

Dear Dan,

The Westhampton Beach roundabout is located at the old Six Corners site. I did not know if it was your usual sarcasm or if you were misinformed. We are in the process of landscaping the center area, and are hoping to put a simple sculpture of our Village seagull.

MOVING ON UP

Dear Dan,

There was an article going back a few years ago about the relocation of the "kite" house to the former Hot Dog Beach location.

What has been going on with this?

Sounded like a good idea to me. Thanks much!

WAR IS HELL

Dear Dan,

The War in Iraq has inflamed the whole Middle East and has done more to help Al Qaeda attract recruits.

We keep on talking about more war against more countries. Instead of this imperialistic attitude why don't we join forces with other nations to combat terrorism by investing in technology. The Bush Administration is more dedicated to their own agenda of controlling and imposing...we the people want a President we can look up to as a humanitarian who works towards world peace not domination.

Police Blotter

Dude. What The Hell?

A 40-year-old man in Montauk began choking a 14-year-old boy after he saw the boy deliberately try to surf into the man's young niece. The boy suffered a minor neck injury and his surfboard received some minor damage after the man threw it on the ground. Kind of makes you feel like the forty-year-old is a pretty radical guy. He's like a mobster or something. Well, if you think choking a fourteen-year-old makes you tough.

Press One For English

A woman's cell phone was stolen out of her backpack at a beach in Amagansett. She called the police and called the phone company. The phone company said that somebody made 350 minutes worth of phone calls to the Dominican Republic. Ironically, the woman had to press one for English in order to get in touch with an English-speaking operator.

Singing Tenant

A landlord got into a fight with his tenant in East Hampton after he found the tenant singing to his wife. Neither men filed charges against one another, and agreed to have the tenant move out. There is really just one rule when you rent a room in a farmhouse in East Hampton. Don't sing to the farmhouse owner's wife.

Sucker Punched

A man in East Hampton had a bit of driving trouble last week. He was driving along the street when he nearly collided into another truck. The truck then followed him until the man pulled over. When he did, two men got out of the truck, walked up to him and clocked him in the face. The man then called the police. The man told police that in general, he is really bad driver, and probably deserved the smack.

Angry

A 46-year-old man was arrested in Sag Harbor after he was found lying on the side of the road in his boxer shorts, semiconscious. Police tried to wake him up and when they did, the man began yelling at them and saying, "Go to hell!" among other bad words and insults. He also resisted the police's attempts to subdue him. Once the man was arrested and calmed down, police learned that the man's wife had thrown him out of the house. She apologized to police for putting too much rum in her homemade rum cake.

Odd

A woman in North Sea called police when she found that someone cut a four-inch hole in her screen door and left three finger impressions on the screen. She said that there was a black tar-like substance on the door. Police are looking for tar-man.

Botox Caper

Somebody stole a vial of Botox, worth about $600, from a clinic in Noyac sometime during July. Police are on the lookout for anyone that looks unusually young for their age and never smiles.

Not The Scotch

A woman in Southampton reported to police that somebody stole her stereo, CDs and ten bottles of scotch from her home. The total value of the goods was estimated to be $2,000. Police told the woman that they will search long and hard for the scotch and music. They have made a deal with the woman that if they do find it, they will have one heck of a party.

BAITING HOLLOW, NY

Have you heard the Buzz?

THE BAITING HOLLOW CLUB

We've just added 52 acres of rolling terrain to the Robert Trent Jones, Sr. designed Fox Hill Golf Course. Hart/Howerton Architects, known locally for the Clubhouse design of the Atlantic Golf Club and the new Sebonack Golf Club, are designing our new clubhouse. The new clubhouse, practice facility, carts, and parking will all be accessible from a new private entrance off Warner Drive. Renowned golf course architects Hurdzan-Fry are helping with redesigning and improving our golf course to accommodate the new clubhouse and other facilities.

It's going to be the Baiting Hollow Club and it will be the

New Crown Jewel of the North Fork.
